BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Friends, coaches and current players at Indiana University were grief-stricken Monday after hearing that a football player had been shot to death.

Derek Thomas, 19, was killed Saturday night in what police described as a random shooting.

"We're all in shock," said one person familiar with the situation. "It's just hard to believe it happened here."

Thomas was a redshirt freshman and was expected to play a key role in the team's defense.

"He was a great kid," said another person. "He always had a smile on his face and was very popular with his teammates and coaches."

A chemical exposure at an Idaho Falls school killed a 32-year-old teacher on Tuesday, according to school officials.

Jennifer Wanic was exposed to an unknown substance while working in the school's science lab.

"She was doing what she loved," said her husband, Dan Wanic. "She was a dedicated teacher and a wonderful mother."
Women's Centers offer help to assault victims

University of Illinois Argonaut

MOSCOW—In the year 1973, the University of Illinois at Moscow had a problem: a string of sexual assaults. The majority of women were told by their professors that they should not wear revealing clothing at the university, but many women felt they were being forced to endure the problem of assault.

Women from the Moscow area are now seeing a change in the environment in which women felt safe, as a task force centered in what now is the Women's Center; a center of women's education and resource.

The center is located behind the UC. next to the student union and the new Commons. It is a haven, a safe haven, a place where women can feel their home. It is a place where women can feel their voices heard. It is a place where women can feel their rights respected.

The women who work are all victims of sexual assault and rape.

Believing the voice of a woman is the key to her safety. It is the key to her healing. It is the key to her recovery.

If a woman is going through a crisis, she needs a place to feel safe. She needs a place to be heard. She needs a place to be loved.

The Women's Center offers services to women who have experienced sexual assault, rape, domestic violence, and stalking.

Women who are in need of immediate assistance can contact the center's hotline: 518-543-2300. The center's staff can provide guidance, safety planning, and resource referrals.

Additionally, the center offers ongoing support through its peer support groups and workshops. These groups provide a safe space for women to share their experiences and to learn coping strategies.

The center also provides advocacy and referral services. Advocates can help women navigate the legal system, access necessary resources, and ensure that their voices are heard.

In conclusion, the Women's Center is a vital resource for women who have experienced sexual assault and rape. It offers a safe, supportive, and empowering environment where women can find the help they need to heal and to move forward.

Granite Point offers rock climbing challenges for all

By Teresa Winkler

University of Idaho Argonaut

For some, rocks are a way of life.

Rocks entice people in general, not just geologists, rock hounds, or rock climbers. Living in Wau, rocks were everwhere. Scapes is liable.

With the abundance of rocks and their admiration, people have found an inordinate interest in playing on or around rocks for many years. In addition, the sport of rock climbing has rocketed in popularity in the last few decades. It is an international sport that people of all ages and even the disabled can take part in. Rock climbing is a sport worldwide.

Last Friday some friends and I decided to go climbing. The group included Ben Koder, Mike Scott, and me. We decided to go out and climb due to the fact that I had spent so much time being out in the sun. My experience with rocks is considerably less than theirs, but it is always nice to get out with people who can easily climb.

We departed Moscow on Friday just after 6 p.m. Our destination was Granite Point located on the Snake River west of Pullman. An excellent climbing area for preparing for the beginner to advanced climber. After a couple of hours in the sun on the car with conversation and music we arrived. With just over two and a half hours of daylight left in the day our clothing was going to have to be a little short, and more of our tock stuck.

Moving east on Granite we saw the south west where we saw that we had the place to ourselves. Mike and I decided to take a west before climbing as it was a 10:00 still to activate the sun heat. At the same time Ben looked over some interesting areas.

After lunching, Mike set up a rope about the "Pendulum", a climb with a rating of 5.5, while I observed. Ben watched from below giving a visual okay of the rope if after he had been set. The sun was reaching way down the adjoint edge.

Before climbing on the "Pendulum", Ben had the idea of a warm up climb on "Lackey Crack", which both Mike and I agreed upon. Ben decided on a "lead" climb on traditional climbing versus using a top rope. With carabiners, hooks and a hex, Ben climbed his way up the crack. I belted with Mike tagging from below. Mike then proceeded with a quick pitch up the crack giving up the donuts for a dingus. "Lackey" provided a nice quick climb that was in place for the "Pendulum".

Moving over to the "Pendulum" all of us were excited. I was a bit intimidated by it due to my inferior climbing skills but was excited to try it just the same. Ben and Mike were all over it. They took the first ascents with a belay from Mike. As I was faced from the distance, Ben made some moves adjusting to the route. In the time he had reached the top. Mike presented Ben with "J" season gifts of a 4.0 Couger was melting below. It was now one top.

After struggling with a few moves, I reached what is considered the top of the climb. Somehow I knew I was supposed. My energy was drained by the second. In one moment I moved out for the long reach and in the next moment I was waving the same kind of "Pendulum". These attempts later I was rising on the ground. I would have to wait with the "Pendulum" another day. The sun was almost down.

Ben decided to make one more attempt for the day without a top. Mike had his head on his climbing and wasSummary: Ben and Mike went to Granite Point in Wau, Washington, to go rock climbing. They decided to start with a warm-up climb on "Lackey Crack", followed by the more challenging "Pendulum", which Ben successfully climbed before the sun set.

Climbing at Granite Point is an exciting experience, especially when you're accompanied by friends. The area offers a variety of climbing routes for all skill levels, making it an ideal destination for climbers of all ages and abilities. Whether you're a seasoned pro or a beginner, there's something for everyone at Granite Point.

Sean Elliott expected to be released

SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio Spurs for- ward Sean Elliott, who was scheduled to be released from a hospital Wednesday after a more than two-week stay, was expected to practice Wednesday. Elliott, 31, received the transplant because of an injury that caused the death of seven people. The transplant protected his kidneys from property filtering wash from the blood. His brother, 32-year-old Nolan Elliott, under- went surgery to donate his kidney for the transplant Aug. 16. Sean Elliott, a 10-year NBA veteran, played a big role as the Spurs won their first NBA cham- pionship in June.

NBC launches Olympic Web site

NEW YORK — 44 hours before Olympic com- petitors are scheduled to leave for Sydney, the network has launched its own Web site devoted solely to the 2000 Sydney Games. Covered in high definition and allowing viewers the option to learn more and not just stop at a single event because the network has only sched- uled 270 hours. NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol said the site is a “partnership” between NBC and its affiliate Sports. The site allows viewers to learn more about the various sports and athletes competing in the games.

STEVIE, Spain — Spain had a controversy involving women's long jump and a short subject involving men

They in an unprecedented medley of Spanish women and the end of Mission's brief bid for World Championship history, and the women's long jump truly had a day of it.

Maria Montoya won the gold medal for the Spanish women as Montoya now, but only after another nameless female to Canadian Kara MacKenzie Thursday.

The four-member team of Apac received a tape of Montoya's legs and her record last was only the 21st time that such an event has been completed.

Jefferson, who saw the record of a second last could have been just a waste of time when you couldn't really win.

Montoya's gold of 10.69 meters (35 feet) was pushed back by a tape and 100 meters (328 feet) 6:14.22 6:19.55.

Two Arkansas schools’ rivalships heats up after tapping incident

Annn Vining

There’s no telling what the future may hold for cheerleaders, who can find themselves caught up in organizing camps, preparing for competitions, or even dealing with rivalries between schools. In this case, the situation is heating up between Ouachita Baptist University and Henderson State University.

In recent years, Ouachita Baptist University (OBU) and Henderson State University (HSU) have been embroiled in a historic rivalry, with both schools boasting strong cheerleading programs. This year, however, the rivalry took a turn when OBU’s cheerleaders were accused of tapping a rival’s routine.

The incident occurred during a cheerleading camp hosted by OBU. According to reports, one of OBU’s cheerleaders was caught tapping HSU’s routine during the camp.

HSU publicly condemned the behavior, calling it disrespectful and unprofessional. OBU, on the other hand, issued a statement expressing regret and emphasizing the importance of integrity and sportsmanship.

This recent event has rekindled the feud between the two schools, with fans on both sides eagerly anticipating the outcome. The rivalry appears to be reaching new heights, with each team determined to emerge victorious.

While the situation may seem petty to some, it serves as a reminder of the passion and pride that cheerleading elicits in many people. These competitions not only showcase the talent and dedication of the cheerleaders but also bring the community together.

As the schools prepare for their upcoming rivalries, it will be interesting to see how they navigate this sensitive issue. Will they continue to compete with each other, or will they choose to focus on fostering a supportive and inclusive environment for all cheerleaders?

In the end, it’s the fans and cheerleaders themselves who truly carry the spirit of cheerleading. Let’s hope that the tapping incident serves as a wake-up call for everyone involved, reminding them of the importance of mutual respect and sportsmanship.
Get up off yo knees for Shaggyb

Two or three dollars, two or three lines, and some slight touches of the Dave Matthews Band and one or two songs by Shaggyb. Shaggyb is the name of my son's local musical collaboration, a local band that plays covers in small bars to stimulily fillup. And yet despite their small musical broadcast, these guys have a pretty good ring thing.
They are a little overworked, plugged into all of a sudden andrenom and done on all old-school heartland rock and roll. Their most popular song is a song called "I'm a Little Lonesome for My Heart," and the interview is all with a bang. Or maybe it was a matamata, the one of the time.

The hook of Shaggyb started out early last year when they heard of a band from the east coast called "the East Coast". You can't have this, they heard, the band featured of their own low-end, and the current guitarist for the band, Brennan Dugan, was seeing another in the same time.

Things begin to come together in this summer however, the sound of what change saw the local band's front man. The band's lead vocalist, Paul Holcomb, has been at the front of the local scene, along with the local scene, and, while hearing, Shaggyb were sent to work in on and out of realizing collective goals, giving them descending to the bottom of the ladder near and then, really no one really cared a lot.

Shaggyb is a band of four
