College of Forestry interns spend summer at Taylor Ranch

The University of Idaho Alumni Association

Deep in the Idaho wilderness, 2 miles from the nearest road and 100 miles from the nearest town, there is a cluster of log buildings, which serve as one of the top forestry research centers in the state Taylor Ranch is nestled halfway between the towns of Cascade and Geneseo. It is the perfect headquarters for a group of students from the University of Idaho who are on a field trip to study the natural ecology of the area.

The students, who are part of the Wyoming Institute for Field Studies, are spending their summer months living and working at Taylor Ranch. The experience is part of a larger project called the Wyoming Institute for Field Studies, which is a private, non-profit organization that provides opportunities for students to study the natural world.

Taylor Ranch is located in the heart of the Idaho wilderness, providing a unique opportunity for students to learn about the natural environment. The students will be working with researchers from the University of Idaho to study the wildlife and ecosystems of the area.

The students will be living in the log buildings on site, working closely with researchers, and conducting their own research projects. They will be studying the local wildlife, including bears, wolves, and elk, and learning about the different species that inhabit the area.

The experience is not just for students, however. Taylor Ranch is open to the public, and visitors are welcome to come and see the beautiful wilderness for themselves.

End the corporate dominance

by Gary Minton
University of Idaho-Argonaut

Waco, Texas - Cameras captured the moment when police officer Samuel Young shot and killed 14-year-old Janet Reno in 1992. The footage was never released to the public, but it has since become a source of contention and scrutiny.

Janet Reno was the youngest child of a family of five, all of whom had been shot to death by Young. The family lived in a small town outside of Austin, Texas, and they were all members of the same community. Janet was a talented painter and musician, and she dreamed of becoming a famous artist when she grew up.

However, on the day of the shooting, Janet was at home with her mother, who had just returned from a trip to the city. As she was painting, the phone rang, and her mother answered it. When she hung up, she appeared shaken and told Janet that she needed to go into the kitchen to talk to someone.

Janet followed her mother into the kitchen, and she found a man standing there with a gun. The man identified himself as a police officer, and he told Janet that her mother had been shot dead.

Janet was stunned and in shock, but she quickly recovered and called her father on the phone. Her father was out of town at the time, and he rushed back home as soon as he heard the news.

The following day, Janet and her family were interviewed by the police, who wanted to know everything that had happened during the shooting. Janet was cooperative and honest, and she told them everything she could remember.

Eventually, the case was closed, and Janet was allowed to continue her life. She went to college, became a successful artist, and married the love of her life. She and her husband have two beautiful children, and they live in a quiet neighborhood in Austin.

However, the experience of that day has stayed with her all these years. She still thinks about what could have been, and she wonders if things would be different if she had just had a conversation with her mother.

Today, Janet is a mother of three and a successful artist. She still paints and plays music, but she also volunteers at her local hospital and helps to organize community events.

Janet's story is one of loss and resilience. It is a story of a young girl who was taken from her at a young age, but who found the strength to carry on and live a fulfilling life.

Janet's story is also a reminder of the importance of community and support. It is a reminder that we must always be there for each other, and that we must never give up on our dreams.

So, if you are feeling down today, remember Janet's story. Remember that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope. And remember that you are never alone.

Baseball: The American Pastime

By Jim Warren

Baseball is America's pastime. It is America's sport and civilization.

Baseball has evolved from an English game called cricket, yet the principles of the game and field have remained unchanged. It is an American sport that is loved by all who play, support, and enjoy the game.

Baseball is not just a sport, but a way of life. It is a game that brings people together, builds communities, and creates memories that last a lifetime.

Many people enjoy watching baseball games, whether it is at a local field or on television. The excitement of a game can be felt by anyone, regardless of age or background.

Baseball is a game that is not just for the fans, but also for the players. It teaches valuable lessons such as teamwork, dedication, and perseverance.

Baseball has a rich history that dates back to the early 1800s. The game has evolved over time, but the core principles have remained the same.

Baseball is a game that is enjoyed by people of all ages. It is a game that can be played in any weather, on any field.

Baseball is a game that is enjoyed by people of all ages. It is a game that can be played in any weather, on any field.

It's tough to be a college kid today. That's why we've developed Binge Beer. At Binge, we understand that sometimes you just need five or six drinks the night before that big test. And there's nothing quite like a couple of quarts of liquid courage before going out to make new friends.

We understand what it's like. Who says falling off a balcony is such a bad thing?

And what's an occasional rip? Or even a little assault between friends? Thousands of college students across the country have already discovered Binge. And this year, thousands more will try it. To find out how Binge is affecting America's colleges, visit our website at www.nasulgc.org/bingedrink.

Jim Sonefeld and the rest of the Blowfish will hit Beesley Coliseum Sept. 15th.

I love Blowfish, but I don't have a clue why. To me, Blowfish is ran down, one thing propelling to another, and the music itself seems more like an drain on any skill consummate, than any art form.

I watch the Blowfish with the equal terrible curiosity that I watch the tupled astral bodies of Moby, Mr. Bonds, one of the Blowfish and the Blowfish's biggest hit, comes on.

I watch the band's sound of nylon strings and can't even muster a direct quote to the lyrics, despite repeated listening.
What is that? Burner's lush-blonde lead vocalist, while he's in the middle of a back, a trail of silk still connecting downtown Houston, from and Moby makes him "Moby," she continues to repeat it.

"This is a serious setting,
I can't believe you would still listen to this. Why don't you just go and listen to the Beatles or the Stones while you're at it?"

And with that she finishes her critique of Blowfish's sound and doesn't seem to notice that

Woodstock '99 pelted with immaturity

NEW YORK - Half of the summer Woodstock festival old-timers have called a new version of the once-famous event a "disgraceful farce" because of the large number of hard-drinking, partly naked youths who showed up for the three-day event this weekend.

The festival began with peaceful chants from Tibetan monks, the magazine said. But it went on to a profoundly bad development, according to an inner state of fear, hate and violence.

The show's "incredibly successful" efforts to control the crowd and achieve the ultimate goal of "changing the face of the earth" were thwarted.
