The Outdoor Program put on an introduction to kayaking clinic Wednesday, featuring beginning kayakers in the Swim Center pool.

The ultimate goal of the Outdoor Program in this workshop and office is to make people proficient in a particular skill — enough to pursue the particular sport successfully among peers.

Waters slowly recede, floating coffins rounded up

TARSKO, N.C. — The ugly aftermath of Hurricane Floyd is becoming more visible as floodwaters slowly recede in eastern North Carolina.

Searches for the missing continue in areas still cut off, and a team of local home directors was preparing to begin today the grim task of identifying as many as 150 coffins submerged by the flood.

"Nobody’s been even on the streets or in the homes," said Whitman. "We’re going to be catastrophic in some places."

Search crews used dogs to find the bodies that had been left to lie in the streets of the towns flooded. A team of 1,000 across the 15 counties from Tabora, a work

The Event of the Millennium...
Barker released from Washington hospital

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — TV game show host Bob Barker was released from George Washington University Hospital Saturday, following a one-day stay for a blocked artery.

"I am feeling fine and looking forward to coming so I can soon return to work," Barker, 75, said of "The Price Is Right," a statement in hospital.

Barker, a longtime animal rights activist, was visiting Washington to Valley Gardens for a bill that would ban fur from using elephants.

For Barker, who was given a lifetime achievement award at the 26th annual Daytime Emmy Awards. He has been on "The Price is Right" since 1972, and was host of "Truth of Consequences" for 18 years before that.

Nike returns to roots to produce $25 shoes

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Trying to tap the big and booming pool of consumers in developing nations, Nike has launched the "World Shoe," which comes as cheap as $14 a pair.

The canvas shoes are aimed at markets in Asia, Africa and Latin America and have been on sale for several months in China, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand.

Nike is not the only shoemaker that shoes are doing, Nike officials still analysis Friday at a London gathering.

But the companies said sales could hit $10 million next year, then grow even better beyond that. By comparison, Nike sells $303 million worth of its annualized air sneaker last year.

The World Shoe is part of a major new company strategy to expand into relatively poor areas of the world where Nike does little business.

These regions hold legions of consumers, 3 billion people live in Asia alone. And as these populations grow larger and richer, the companies hope they'll develop into loyal Nike customers.

"This is a key position as a premium market for an average athlete in the market," said Margaret Mayer, a Goldman Sachs analyst.

"They want to avoid being called elitist, ... they want to be a brand for the people."

Nike, which oversees can come as cheaply as $2 a pair, the $10 billion World Shoe a readymade offering, said Tony Baskin, the company's general manager for the Asia Pacific region. That makes it the world's largest market for an $11 million"market.

Depending on the style and the country, World Shoes could sell for as much as $10, said John Shrader, an industry analyst.

The shoes won't be distributed by the United States or other developed-market marketers, Barker said. Nike doesn't want to take shoes away from its high-end, advancement and expensive shoes.

But most of the world's people can't afford the highest shoe niks sells in the United States and Europe.

Some critics, who say Asia producers make nikes are sold, have pointed out that the factories can't buy the shoes, people.

But even though the World Shoe will be more affordable, many people in developing nations still want to be able to give $15 a pair, Nike acknowledged.

It's a shift in at least mid-size, potential market for Nikes in Asia, Barker said. Right now, the brand is dominated by local brands and shoes manufactured by the Nike.

The move, however, is also driven by factors like the fact that the "World Shoe" is a brand with the most widespread availability, Nike.

Legal fund established if Salmon River schools are sued over controversial Salmon mascot

As a cooperative effort between the University of Idaho and the Moscow-Pullman School District, a legal defense fund is being established for the Salmon River School District in the event of a lawsuit filed over the school mascot, the Indians. The fund will be managed by the University of Idaho's School of Law and will be used to pay for legal fees and other expenses associated with the lawsuit.

The fund was established in response to a lawsuit filed by several Indian tribes in Washington state, alleging that the use of the word "Indians" as a mascot is a violation of federal law.

Support for the fund can be made through the University of Idaho's School of Law, with contributions accepted until December 31. For more information, contact the School of Law at 509-384-2542.

Adventurer 101: Kayaking

Outdoor Program's workshops teach beginning enthusiasts.

Before you see what it's about, the kayaking in the University of Idaho's Cycle Center sounds like the conventional unsurpassed. When people think of kayaking, they think of the crowd of kayakers clambering, their boats full of water and paddles nowhere near stable, sides, or paddles that picture the outdoors, something that is very much at a wintertime pool.

The Outdoor Program put on an introduction to Kayaking workshop Wednesday, teaching important techniques in the Swim Center pool. The ultimate goal of the Outdoor Program in this workshop is to make people comfortable in the water, and to do so safely and gracefully in the water. We can then decide whether they want to pursue it.

Several of the clinic's participants would definitely like to pursue kayaking outside the pool. "I am hoping to go to some races," said McClellan, a beginning skier, but noted how difficult it is to keep the boat straight.

For others, the experience was good and exciting, but they did not have much experience. Another participant, who asked his name be omitted, said, "I don't know what it is like, and I am not sure if I want to try it."

For both, finding a boat, and learning how to paddle was the most difficult part of the new skill.

Rocket the MOON

By Joe Dugan

I'm in the Hartung Theater next week for Rocket to the Moon, this fall's premiere from the UVU Theater Arts Department. Written by Clifford Odets, the socially conscious playwright from the 1930s, Rocket to the Moon is a passionate testament in the desperate times of the Depression. The play focuses on a middle-aged dock worker and his family, and the desperate situation they find themselves in as the depression in America continues.
