Foresters' Hoodawn
SCHEDULED ON OCT. 6

The foresters will give the first all college class to be given for the year at 7:30 p.m. on the evening of October 6. The committee in charge is Dr. R. P. Gooding.

WIDE FIELD OPEN IN ARCHITECTURAL PENALTIES

The university of Idaho now requires students to prove their attendance at the College of Idaho games in order to be eligible for the team's athletic scholarships. This rule has caused a lot of dissatisfaction among students and faculty members.

ENGLISH CHANGES MADE

Courses in Public Speaking and Journalism now offer a course in Writing and Reporting.

The course in Public Speaking is being offered for the first time this year. It is designed to give students an understanding of the principles of effective public speaking and to develop their ability to prepare and deliver speeches.

The course in Journalism is also new this year. It is designed to introduce students to the field of journalism, including the writing of news stories, feature articles, and editorials.

The course in Writing and Reporting (132) will be offered again this year. It is a required course for all majors in the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences.

In addition to these courses, a course in English Composition (131) will be offered this year. It is designed to help students improve their writing skills.

Four Year Tire

The course in Public Speaking is one of the few courses in which students are required to work in small groups. This allows them to practice and improve their public speaking abilities in a supportive environment.

The four-year tire is a tradition at the university of Idaho. It is a period during which students are required to complete all course requirements for graduation.

EXCLUSIVE BOARD

A special board for the college's exclusive board has been established to handle the special needs of students who are majoring in the arts and sciences.

The exclusive board will be held in the UI at 4th Wednesday of each month.

V. C. C.

A recent survey of the student body revealed that 65% of the students are enrolled in the College of the Arts and Sciences.

The survey also showed that 75% of the students in the College of the Arts and Sciences are varsity athletes.

Origin of "Vandal" Name Traced to History Class

In 1945 there was a vitis vinifera which was introduced into the United States from Italy. It is thought that the vine was brought to Idaho by a student from the College of Idaho.

The vine was named "Vandal" after the student who brought it to Idaho. The name "Vandal" is derived from the Latin word "Vandalus," which means "barbarian." The vine was later used as a mascot for the Idaho football team.

ARGONAUT, November 29, 1939

MEMORANDUM

An incident has occurred which has caused much discussion among the student body. In a recent press dispatch, the University of Washington "breaks down and confesses" that the Huskies have a我又 schedule before them. They are even "forced to admit" that they play every "every game" while the "gambler" team in the Pacific Coast conference, with the exception of Stanford. And they have no game with Idaho.

By do so playing they isolate Idaho among the "minor" or C-team schools.

But when Idaho, as was scheduled for this season arranged, they made it known that Idaho couldn't Under any circumstances be given a game.

People will wonder...

STUDENT OPINION

The Argonaut is a publication of the students of the University of Idaho. It is their paper, run for them, by them.

There many students who have ideas that are constructive and worthy of expression to the student body. There are faults in the present system as it has been worked out, and these have been pointed out and altered after years of experiences, but they are not yet entirely perfect.

It is all the more disgraceful when the cooperation of all those concerned that things can be kept running smoothly. Idaho has the Argonaut in The Argonaut, clear, sound criticism is desired. If there are such things as you, a member of the University of Idaho, and are informed of the changes and alterations that are being made in this situation with the student body standpoint.

If such a member could be appointed he would serve as the eyes and ears of undergraduate body and be of extreme value in the school of colleges of the University of Idaho.

The student government should bring the student into closer relations with the student body and justly the concession.

The next time for a two or three, or if, it seemed best, but the student body seems entitled to some measures of his preference in assigning dates for its own social events.

WHY NOT?

How would it be if the sophomores adopted some distinctive form of dress to indicate their class—say a checkered cap. The seniors have their symbol. They carry caps and gowns and other dress accessories, and more closely in touch with the situation from the student body standpoint.

If such a member could be appointed he would serve as the eyes and ears of undergraduate body and be of extreme value in the school of colleges of the University of Idaho.

AT LAST

We have always known about the poor treatment towards the University of Idaho's football team, but the recent public opinion, when your team in action.

Although we would call a man like Aristotle a thoroughly efficient and competent organizer in the field of journalism, we may say that his efforts, have been concentrated in the direction of winning the respect of the public and the like.

Through the recent dispatch, the University of Idaho has been assigned an optimistic flavor which is likely to improve the interest in the university's football team.
