J.C. PENNEY COMPANY

There's A Man In South Africa Who Buys Penny Suits

He runs a small woolen manufacturing company, D.D. Jaffa & Co., but it's his talent as a wool merchant that has made him famous. He buys wool in the bush, and sells it in the city. But he is not alone, for there are many others in the same business. These men are known as "wool merchants" and they operate in the same way, buying wool in the bush and selling it in the city.

But the wool merchants don't just sell wool. They also buy it, and they do this by traveling to the bush and buying it directly from the shepherds. They then take it to the city and sell it to the wool manufacturers, who make it into cloth and sell it to the public.

There is a surprising vivacity and an unexpected demureness, a young naiveté about our fashion which comes so close to being "IT" as "anything we know of!"
