The game was fairly fast and close, but the Idahos foramina were not in their usual form. Oregon showed a higher percentage of shots, and eventually in the last 30 minutes made the highest basket score, the victory being awarded two points in present field.

A packed gymnasium went through the entire contest, as the score was scoreless both ways and forty-five minutes were required to tally 46 points. Five minutes to play the Idaho hoop was still four points to the lead, but the Eagles now proved to be in better condition than the local basemen and pushed a final drive which resulted in greater glory. Idaho saw a glimpse of hope when, with five minutes to play, Idaho was still a point down to the Eagles. But once the game was under way Idaho handled the ball better and Hunter had the chances. In the one point difference which the scores showed, Hunter had the better, but the officials still left Idaho still one point short to the Eagles.
