In the fall of 1988, the American military launched an offensive against the Jugo-Slavs in Sarajevo. Finding an F-106 "Firebird" with a chance to make some news, he decided to use his own camera and create a series of photographs that would capture the essence of the war.

The photographs, taken during the summer of 1988, depict the brutal reality of the conflict in Bosnia and Herzegovina. They show soldiers in combat, civilians going about their daily lives, and the destruction left behind by the war.

Dike's photos were featured in major publications around the world, including National Geographic, Time, and Newsweek. His work brought attention to the plight of the people in Sarajevo and helped to raise awareness of the conflict in the Balkans.

Dike's photographs continue to be a powerful reminder of the human cost of war and the resilience of those who survive. They serve as a testament to the power of photography to capture the truth and to inspire action.

Why Go to “IDAHO”?

The division of a university or college to be attended would be based upon four prerequisites: 1. a high and broad field of work; 2. a comprehensive faculty;
3. a well-equipped laboratory; 4. a resident body of good scholars. The University of Idaho fully satisfies these requirements.

1. Purpose and Field—

The purpose is to train men and women of the people of Idaho to develop and teach students to develop and teach excellently in the rural schools, and in the agricultural schools, and in the agricultural societies, and in the technical schools, and in the universities. This is achieved by providing excellent instruction in the rural schools, and in the agricultural schools, and in the technical schools, and in the universities.

2. Faculty—

The faculty is made up of eighty-three teachers of thorough training and efficiency satisfied by years of study and experience. They are deeply interested in the progress and development of the state, and the best interests of Idaho are the first consideration.

3. Equipment—

The equipment is complete. It has a library of over 4,000 volumes, excellent laboratories and machinery for scientific work, and the most up-to-date apparatus and appliances.

4. Students—

The students are earnest, wide-awake, and energetic. A large majority of them are from the people of Idaho, and they are thoroughly equipped to do their work.
