Three original programs for "Little Theatre" Spring by the "Afterburners" and "The Happening"

Perhaps the most unique program of the college year will be presented in the near future by the Pacific Players. In true with their policy of programing as well as chromiuming, three of their number have written original plays which are to be produced under the direct super vision of the individual play-wright.

So far this year almost all plays have been under the direction of Professor Calvert and the women, who have received from these talented enough to see them being greatly enjoyed by those who are actually "Students: (Little Theatre)." These plays are well worth seeing and we dare predict that the future will return no greater branch of the self ish, and will show more of its arabesques.

Three Clever Plays. Since the last program and elocution stage cannot make a good play up but a good show, a sordid award should be said about these plays. "Afterburners," a philosophical rev olution of a romantic situation, is in a point of its little plot which moves as little. "The Happening" is the lullaby by Mrs. Clark is a clever idea, new in the picture, nine to be played and one to act out. "The Happening" is the point of the plot which appears to be the most a

"The Argonaut," with Alfred Thomas and Robert Gurley, is under the direction of Stan Anderson, who has had a considerable amount of experience with the drama club. The play is to be presented at the University in this great Idaho rivalry. The game is a battle for the last seat in the conference, with a possible tie-breaking game at the end of the season. With both teams coming off impressive victories in their last games, the outcome of this match is expected to be a nail-biter.

Business Management Important.
The business management of the conference is crucial in the success of the athletic programs. The conference must be able to fund the necessary equipment and facilities for the teams to compete on an equal footing. Without proper management, the conference could face financial difficulties and negatively impact the overall quality of the athletic programs.

The conference held a meeting on Monday to discuss business management strategies. The meeting was attended by representatives from all the member universities. A key discussion point was the need for increased revenue from ticket sales and sponsorships.

C. C. Gaylord, who has been the conference's business manager for the past year, is responsible for overseeing the financial aspects of the conference. Gaylord has worked in various sports management roles and brings a wealth of experience to the position.

The conference has implemented several initiatives to increase revenue, including the introduction of new ticket pricing structures and partnerships with local businesses. The conference is also exploring new opportunities in the digital realm to engage fans and increase visibility.

The conference is committed to providing a top-tier athletic experience for its student-athletes and fans alike. Through strategic business management, the conference aims to support its athletic programs while ensuring a sustainable and successful future.
