B. R. Snell, Solicitor for the Northern Pacific, addressed the lawyers present last week.

"Lawyers are like pilots of aircraft," he said, "and you will meet the next generation of lawyers at the college where you put the great deal of your time into the practice.
I have had the honor to handle many of the new cases that come before the courts, and I have found that the young lawyers are able to handle
the most difficult problems with the aid of the judges.

I have also had the fortune to meet many lawyers who were able to handle
the most difficult
problems
with the aid of the judges.

The great
knowledge of
the judges
is a great
asset
in
practice
law."
