Co-Eds To Wear Everything But Trovers, Latest Style Decree

The modesty of Washington socialites, with their halter neck blouses and chiffon frocks which show only a bare inch of decolletage, will have to be increased by a hundredfold, because, according to the latest fashions, a girdle will be the only thing that will protect the lower portion of their faces from the view of the public. The new fashion is to have a thin girdle around the waist, with a sort of a garter-like affair going down each side. The girdle is to be made of the same material as the dress, and the top of it is to have a small wooden button. The girdle is to be fastened with a pin, and the pin is to be made of the same material as the dress.

The new fashion is very suitable for women who are not too tall, and who do not have too much flesh on their bodies. It is also very suitable for women who do not have much hair on their heads. The girdle is to be worn with a skirt, and the skirt is to be made of the same material as the dress. The skirt is to be very full, and it is to be made to go down to the ground. The skirt is to be fastened with a string, and the string is to be made of the same material as the dress.

Welcome

With the entrance of two more national fraternities on campus, this makes the total number of our chapter houses to ten, and adds the seal of intercollegiate activity recognition. Credit for securing the installation of these two national fraternities is due the untiring interest of our local organizations, petitioning them, although every assistance possible was forthcoming, by alumni of the faculty, and the rest of the student-at-large. Idaho already has an enviable reputation in one branch of its collegiate life, but basketball record has given her new recognition. She is rapidly and surely forging ahead in several other lines of sports. Her scholastic standing has never been higher, and now; with its new intercollegiate enrollment and its consequent enlarging sphere of activity, the Idahoian is greater, in spirit, if not in numbers.

And who can say that the new Idaho chapter of Alpha Chi Omega is not deserving of its reward? The organization which has built its own beautiful home and has filled its place in campus life successfully and admirably has surely more than earned its national recognition.

And to the men who soon will make the Idaho chapter of Sigma Chi as one of the credit for their tireless efforts to succeed in doing what they have now done. And their campus recognition and reputation has been assured by the high standards and qualifications of their members.

To Alpha Chi Omega: congratulations and welcome in this, your first year. Welcome, men of Sigma Chi, welcome. And thank you for the realization of the Miami Triad on the Idaho campus.

Our Traditions

A surprisingly small number of Idaho students really know what traditions are. These are traditions, and there are many who are ever unaware of the actual existence of many of our most treasured customs.

In co-operation with the "T" club, The Argonaut, during the present semester, is going to uncover the history of all the university traditions, explain their origin and meaning, and attempt to make them seem more worth while in the eyes of the student-at-large. Idaho's customs and traditions are many. The Vandals university is in a position to boast of a group of customs uniquely as well as having more traditions than the country institutions.

Traditions are a vital part of collegiate spirit and life. They form a part of life, as life always builds, of the framework of the whole structure. And it is they should be called out, understood, and appreciated.

Assemblies

Two changes were inaugurated at the last assembly. The first, and a student gathering of exactly what it should be,—dignified, and formal, around a speaker. There is some semblence of tradition and custom has been built. The suggestion made by President Upham, that an Idaho song be sung at the beginning, and "Auld Lang Syne" at the end of every assembly was tried, and it immediately met with unanimous approval. As a part of every assembly, aid to a great degree in giving that touch of normality that has been so lacking before.

The second suggestion, which has been definitely adopted, eliminates the maid rush that has been the custom in previous years, and students are now able to walk out with no risk of life, in an orderly, quiet manner.
