The meeting of the old Infirmary and the building and clearing of the channels and the construction of the students' dormitories were accomplished, and the campus was once again free from filth.

The campus was completed by the Parity Currency company on its thirty-five-acre site, and the old Infirmary was refurnished and the new office was given to the public.-

THE FOLK DANCE LESSONS

The Folk Dances Lessons are held every Thursday evening at 2:30 P.M. in the early part of the year, and 7:30 P.M. in the latter part of the year. The lessons are open to all students, and any student who wishes to learn the dances will be admitted.

ARMSTRONG GIVES TALK TO ASSOCIATED MINERS

I. K. Armstrong, secretary of the Columbia section of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, with which Associated Miners is affiliated as a junior society, has returned from the first of the week, and attended the meetings of the Associated Miners on Monday night.

Armstrong is a close friend to Ben Franklin M. Thomas, of the Horse Creek and a well-known mining engineer at headquarters at Helena.

The local mines have a good chance to show off next week, as the Priest Lake district is said to have been discovered in that vicinity. The monster of the week is said to have been mined in the Priest Lake district, and the other miners on the mining district have been hard at work on the discovery.

THE KENWORTHY

TWO as most bright tell of the Northwest, and it is a remarkable story of how two men from the same city have become successful in their respective fields.

The first of the two is Johny Mac, who is the founder of the Northwest Lumber Company, and the second is Jack Wilson, who is the president of the Washington Lumber Company. These two men have been working together for many years, and they have become very close friends.

They were both born in the same city, and they went to school together. They both graduated from the same high school, and they both went to college together. They both became successful in their respective fields, and they both became very wealthy.

The story of their success is a remarkable one, and it is a story of two men who have been able to overcome all the odds and become successful in their chosen fields. They have both been very successful, and they have both made a lot of money.

THE KENWORTHY
VANDALS ABROAD
A great many people throughout the world have advocated that the University of Idaho should annex the state of Idaho. Some of these people have written letters to the university, expressing their desire to have the university's control extended over the state. The university has, in turn, tried to meet these demands by offering to provide public services and facilities for the state. These services include education, research, and public administration. The university is also seeking to expand its role in economic development and community service. The university is working with the state to improve the quality of life for its citizens. The university is committed to providing a world-class education and research environment that will benefit the state and the nation. The university is dedicated to serving the needs of the people of Idaho and to promoting the welfare of the state.
Bouquets or Brickbats?

WHEN 80 or 100 hard-headed business men from all over the state take a whole day of their or less precious time to visit their state university, it means they are interested not only for the situation which they are helping to support. And practically all of them were valedictory this week at the university; they showed it last Monday by their eager desire to visit every nook and crevice of the campus and buildings, and in their increased discursion with the situation as it is in the university.

There has been much controversy. The concern of opinion on the part of the visitors seems to be that the spirit and condition of student life at Idaho is remarkable from every angle. If these men were as well satisfied as they seemed to be, Idaho's profit by the impression it has made on them is inestimable; and each man, as he goes back, has a deepened and multiplied interest for his state and its broadening activities.
