Youth is a time of change, a time of discovery, a time of growth. It is a time when we are free to explore our own identities and to find our place in the world. It is a time when we are free to make mistakes and to learn from them. It is a time when we are free to be ourselves.

But it is also a time of uncertainty, a time of doubt, a time of fear. It is a time when we are free to be afraid of the future, to be afraid of the unknown, to be afraid of the unknown.

But it is also a time of hope, a time of promise, a time of possibility. It is a time when we are free to dream, to imagine, to create.

In spite of a few minor accidents during construction work, school has started again. The surfboard that is supposedly the largest in the state of Idaho is only one of the many things that are beginning to look good in the near future. Both school and business have had more than their share of excitement, and it seems as if no one has yet had a chance to give a new beginning of the school year a thorough going over.

Debbie Peltz Gillis concluded her experiences at University of Idaho at the end of the winter quarter. Her friends and fellow students all hope that she will continue her studies at the University of Idaho in the fall.

The University of Idaho is a veritable paradise for the student who is looking for a place to live and study. The campus is beautifully located on a hillside above the city, and the view from the university is as impressive as the campus itself. The university offers a complete range of courses, from basic to advanced, and there is something for everyone. The University of Idaho is a great place to study and to live, and I highly recommend it to anyone who is considering attending college.
