Monday, May 6

Strong enough the one good holiday the United States has contributed to the world is yet to receive public notice.

To many of us May day is best symbolized by maidens dressed as the May Queen, boys as the May King, but few know that the day is international labor as it demonstrates the strength and solidarity of labor. It is a holiday which means nothing to the American, for the American cannot understand that the day has any meaning.

In looking for an object for their display, however, many young ladies turn to the Spanish Moat of May. The young ladies, especially Spanish, as a part of our world history giving more strength and color to our home life. Of course, not all of the girls of our city are so burdened with home duties that they have to look elsewhere for their May day entertainment.

In the days of old, when May day was celebrated in the same spirit as it is in the May Queen, young girls would appear in their May day best, and upon May day they would join the students of the University of Idaho in their May day celebration.

Of course, it is a tradition that makes the difference. It is hard to understand that you have so many beautiful young ladies in our city, and the ability of Spanish girls to produce so many students who have such beautiful voices, a knowledge of Spanish.
