To Know or To Think?

What engineering, finance, or other of the so-called undergraduate professions has not personally and indirectly misunderstood or disdained, if not outright, at being burdened with cultural liberal ends, and perhaps partially attributed to their technical nature the desire to change the world or to right despair? They were robust.

Specialists in the 119 civil service positions who graduate through various schools of engineering and business schools may today be able to justify general education. For the civil engineers especially, such a broad education means a solid understanding in both the technical and general education areas. Apparate requirements were developed in individual knowledge of the specific fields, their adaptability in thinking, their capacity of expression.

Fortunate were those who had not limited their college preparation to the technical end or school course. They were capable of perceiving the implications of knowledge and not merely of perceiving the means.

Competencies are a laudable as well as technically informed. Society places a premium on people who make a difference. A generalist can do it best.

A generalist is to be held in esteem.

Montana Next for Tracksters; Cougars Win by Big Score

Lebowitz Defeats Dixie Garner

Preparing for their fifth straight dual meet, Idaho tracksters will meet Montana State Saturday in the first track meet of the season. The meet will be held on the Idaho State University track field, officially scheduled for 2 p.m. with Montana State arriving for the meet at 1 p.m.

Though beaten by W.A.C. schools in 1952 and 1953, Montana State has improved and is better equipped to meet the Idaho tracksters this year. Montana State's improved performance is due to the addition of two freshmen, one of whom is a track star at the University of Washington. The tracksters are still struggling in their efforts to get back to their former prowess, but they hope to continue improving. The tracksters are currently ranked fourth in the W.A.C.

I'm Running Unattached

To The Voters

SHOULD A Student Body Representative represent the University of Idaho or his constituents? As I see it, yes. He is a student and not a representative of whom he claims to represent. His constituents are the students, not the Idaho electorate. He is here to protect the interests of the students, not to be a mouthpiece for the Idaho electorate.

I oppose Greek dominance of campus activities. The Greek system is not the answer. As a student and not a representative of whom he claims to represent, I oppose the Greek system.

I am for the establishment of an independent student body. The present system is stifling and does not give the students a voice. I believe in the democratic system and think that the independent student body is the best system for the Idaho Student Body.

I believe in a strong, dynamic, and responsible university. The present system is weak and lacks direction. I believe in a strong, dynamic, and responsible university.

I'm running unattached.
