I have a "Tinkers" bug. There's a story of a boy who tinkerered all his life with an engine, even after he had grown too old to use it. He would sit for hours, lost in his own world, and people would pass by him without noticing him.

"Tinkers" were known as "Tinkers" because they tinkered with things. They were usually old men who had spent their lives working on old machines and engines. They were respected for their knowledge, but they were also lonely.

The "Tinkers" were a special breed. They were born to be inventors, and they would spend their lives trying to perfect their inventions. They were often rejected by the mainstream society, but they were content with their own world.

The "Tinkers" were a symbol of the power of the human spirit. They showed that anyone could be an inventor, that anyone could change the world with their own ideas.

"Tinkers" were a reminder that even the most ordinary things could be turned into something extraordinary. They were a reminder that anything is possible if you believe in yourself and your ideas.

The "Tinkers" were a symbol of the importance of inventiveness. They showed that the world is constantly changing, and that people need to be able to adapt to these changes.

The "Tinkers" were a reminder that the world is full of possibilities, that anything is possible if you have the courage to try. They were a symbol of the power of the human spirit.

I hope you have a "Tinkers" bug, and that you will use it to change the world.

Bank Drills Indicate Team Ready For Gonzaga

Back on the campus after throwing a big race into the hands of the Oregon State Quarter's hopes for Rose Bowl representation Saturday at Columbus, Idaho, its Vandals began heavy practice yesterday in preparation for their Friday afternoon date with the Gonzaga University Bulldogs, Gonzaga, fresh from a 6-to-0 win over Texas Tech last Saturday.

On breaking a three-year skid which has seen the Vandals hold the Bulldogs without a score since 1942, Coach Ted Bank said yesterday: "For both teams the game is a must and I am well satisfied with our progress. We have been well-matched in everything we have done and I look forward to the ball game with considerable optimism."".

The game between the two teams, scheduled for 12:30 Saturday at the Spokane Athletic Club, was moved up to 12:30 Saturday at the request of both schools.

"Gonzaga has a tough team on their hands," Bank said yesterday. "But we have not had a chance to develop the offense that will be needed to score against them."

The Vandals, who have outscored their opponents 189 to 135 this season, have been working on their defense and are expected to hold their own against the Bulldogs.

Friday 13th No Jinx

That was the date on which the game being played on Friday the 13th fell to the Idaho State Quarter's. But today is just as lucky for the Vandals, who have stated that the game will be played on Friday the 13th after all.

The Idaho State Quarter's will play the Gonzaga University Bulldogs at the Spokane Athletic Club on Friday, with the game starting at 12:30 PM.

The Vandals are looking for their second win of the season, while the Bulldogs are attempting to remain undefeated.

"The game is a must for both teams," said Bank. "We are looking for a good performance and we are confident that we can get it."
