The Argonaut is the student newspaper of the University of Idaho, established in 1911. It is published weekly during the academic year and biweekly during the summer.

The Argonaut covers a wide range of topics, including campus news, local news, sports, and entertainment. It is a valuable resource for students and alumni alike.

John D. Miller, who graduated from the University of Idaho in 1933 with a degree in Economics, now serves with the Standard Oil Company in Columbus, South Dakota. Miller, a travel talk with promise, was just announced by Elmer Brown and Jane Maguire in response to requests from members of the Associated Women.

John Miller held a student fellowship from June, 1935, until May, 1938, working in the oil and gas industry. While working in the oil field, he was able to see the conditions of the industry, and he took many pictures which he will show Friday night.

Group to Meet for Christmas

Collected from the local source, this report shows that the 7 Club has taken the matter very seriously and it seems apparent. Donor Wacker of the 7 Club, representative of the Associated Women, announced that the decision should be left to different religious groups on the campus, and that the members of the 7 Club were not going to be a part of it. Since Sunday was the appointed day, and Wacker announced that the members of the 7 Club were not going to be a part of it, the decision should be left to the different religious groups on the campus.
