Variety Of Agricultural Features Featured At Little International

By JAC L. MILLER

Monday, April 24, scores of agricultural students will star in a week long pageant event known as the Little Interna tional. Receiving its name from the Chicago and Pacific International, the Little International is a smaller, more intimate version of the national big brother, the Big International.

The Little International is made up of a variety of agricultural events including lectures, farming, and judging to crop and animal judging. Every event is based in some way in the courses in which the students are enrolled. The students are scored medals and ribbons.

Historical Stand-Arrow's First

Every year a new, selected from candidates named by women's groups, is chosen to reign over the show's many events and award presentations. This year the honor will go to Betty Heusen from Idaho. One will reign over the show, same as the Little International.

One of the purposes of this show is for students to gain firsthand experience in their field of study.

Gown Our Own

Before the Little International, the students gear up and line up to show off their teaching skills and display what they have learned. Experience is a fitting page into their careers and the opportunities the world of dollars and cents can offer them.

The students will be representing various departments of the college and some of the most prestigious ones will be on display.

Honorary Appointment Standing Committee

A permanent selection committee was appointed at the last Senate meeting in accordance with the policy of selecting members of the organization. The committee will select the members of the committee.

This committee will be chosen from the ranks of current and past members of the college. The committee will select the members of the committee.

Many Events Are Planned For Visiting High School Seniors May 6

Students At The University Of Idaho Observe Many Traditions

Students Come From All Over The World To Study At Idaho
Roar Of Skokels Overshadows Other Familiar Campus Sounds

The roaring of plant shrubs and the rumbling of hammer blades has already began to herald the coming of spring at the University of Idaho campus as work on the first major physical project of the Spring semester. The Student Body also is beginning to get its mind on the spring-summer session.

Work on the current building program began last summer, will be resumed with a bang this year, and is likely to be carried on through the summer. The first major undertaking, the Idaho Agricultural Laboratory, will be ready for occupancy in the fall of this year. The building will be located on the main campus.

The Idaho Agricultural Laboratory is planned to house the college of Agriculture, Forestry, and Home Economics. The laboratory will be six stories high, with a capacity of 260 students. It will be located on the north side of the campus, near the Administration building. The laboratory will be equipped with all necessary laboratory equipment, including a complete set of experimental farm equipment.

The Idaho Agricultural Laboratory is the first of several major construction projects planned for the University of Idaho campus. The other projects include the Idaho Agricultural Experiment Station, the Idaho Agricultural Extension Service, and the Idaho Agricultural Research Board.

In addition to these major projects, the University of Idaho will also be working on the completion of several existing buildings, including the Idaho Agricultural College, the Idaho Agricultural School, and the Idaho Agricultural Library.
