The announcement by the faculty that final examinations will be eliminated in this semester has brought a few murmurs and protests. When the masses learn of the full implications of the plan, those few will be the voice of thousands.

"I'm not going to like this," said one student. "That's a lot for us to work on in exams," said another. "It's hard enough now to study on our own."

Others, like the students, have been divided. Some have questioned the plan's effectiveness, while others strongly support the change.

"I think this is a good plan," said one student. "We'll have more time to learn the material, and we won't have to cram for exams."

"I agree," said another. "We'll have more time to enjoy our studies and learn the material, instead of just memorizing it for exams."

Fat Boys Must Be Eliminated, Is Bull Cry Of Porge Preenee

The coaching staff of the University will go on a strict diet which will begin today, according to Porge Preenee, director of athletics. It was felt necessary at this time because of a decrease in the system's profits. Preenee's plan is to work toward a point where University football will be as popular as Harvard.

But notwithstanding, there were some who thought the campaign might be too much. One evening, the Associated Students of the University held a meeting in Preenee's office. He was there to discuss the matter with them, but the students were more interested in the food he was having for dinner. They decided to stand their ground and let him eat as he pleased. Preenee was convinced of the necessity of dieting and he continued to pursue his campaign, to the detriment of the University's finances.

Time In

We were granted an interview with the head coach of Harvard yesterday afternoon. When we asked him the question, he replied: "Sorry, I do not speak French."

Birds Of A Feather

"I do not speak French," he replied. "But I do speak English."

"And why are you here?"

"I am here to discuss the matter of dieting with the University."

"But you are not French."

"I am not French."

"Then why do you speak French?"

"I do not speak French."

"But you just said you do."
