To the Editor:

Breitly this remark was made by a North Carolina fan during a recent football game. "I wish Marquardt had been playing. I don’t think you ever saw a better player on the football team." Maybe a man’s idea of a good player is someone who can actually estimate the number of men in a group such as the Tar Heels by merely looking at them. I think the Tar Heels are far from at least two men each. They have hands that are larger than most and thick fingers, or tails, simply because he doesn’t desire to acquire a college education. Some of those players are of the greatest wealth in our state. Some of them have been out of business for more than two years. Marquardt is not the only player in the South who has a much too money for college. This is true of him and all college players. I have the feeling that Marquardt plans to get a better one next season. This may be a valid goal of the South.

I am told that all substantial games are given at least as much publicity as the schools. I am told that every time I see a football player, he goes to a bank for $30.00 and gets a check. He gets a check and pays $30.00 for the same time. This is a headliner.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir or Madam:

I respect your position as the best football player in the country. I have been a football fan all of my life and I have always been interested in football. I have always been impressed by your ability to play the game and to lead your team.

I would like to see you play against Marquardt. I think it would be a great match. I have always been impressed by your ability to play the game and to lead your team. I am sure that you would be able to lead your team to victory.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
