Communique Corner

Out of the smoke of the Sino-Japanese conflict has come news of the dissolution of the Chinese Communist Fourth Army by the Nationalist generalissimos, Chiang Kai-shek. The Fourth Army has always prided itself on being, and since Soviet Russia stands behind the Chinese Reds, at least this fact is understood.

The struggle in China cannot be rationalized as a simple affair of politics. It is the result of the combination of the part of a united Chinese nation. The Nationalists use the Japanese and the Chinese Communists, and the forces have formed a temporary alliance in the face of the Japanese aggressors. The Fourth Army and Tokyo cannot wipe out the division which has divided the two great forces.

Of the growing prestige of the Chinese Reds among the people who have been long submerged in the hold of the Communist between the Chinese Communist and the Nationalist forces in the fight against Japan, but he has been particularly interested in the representation of the Nationalist government at Chiangking.
