Sailors Invent Translations Of Common Phrases

BY MARY JANE SMYTHE

in the quarterdeck, I would hear the Common Victualling Yard in the distance, and the sound of the sea would roll in. But I was not there. I was in the galley, behind the bar, and the Common Victualling Yard was just a memory. But I knew I would be back. I knew I would be back, and I would bring my sailor's heart with me. I would bring my sailor's heart with me, and I would make it known to all who would listen. I would make it known to all who would listen, and I would make it known to all who would listen.

Foreign Letter Tells News

Of Lorenzo Runenberg

Lorenzo Runenberg, who lives in Idaho, has recently visited his home town and returned with interesting news.

He said, "After the war we have been very busy, but now we are enjoying the peace. The people here are very happy and welcoming." He also mentioned that the local government has been active in organizing events to celebrate the peace.

Runenberg continued, "I have been to visit my relatives in Idaho and they have been very hospitable. They have taken me to see the beautiful scenery and have given me a chance to see the people. I have been very impressed by their hospitality and kindness."

Runenberg expressed his gratitude for the hospitality he received from his relatives and the local government. He said, "I am very grateful for the warm welcome and the kindness of the people. I will always remember my visit to Idaho and the beautiful people I met there."
Vandals Tackle Missouri Barstormers

Cheney Downs Unbeaten Idaho Vandals 36-27

The Vandals (26) do the only intersectional basketball game of the season Saturday night when the University of Washington women's basketball team battles the Idaho Vandals (36), a member of the Mountain States Conference.

The battle will be in ceiling position during the 1944-45 season, and is the first meeting of the Vandals at the University of Washington in recent years.

This season the Vandals have been the only team in the state of Idaho to win a game, and they have averaged 41 points per game, including a victory over Montana 67-51.

The Vandals are coached by Dr. John E. Boas, who has been at the university since 1933, and is the only man in the state of Idaho to have coached a team that has averaged 41 points per game.
