Trapp Family To Sing Here

Trapp family, who will give a concert of 16th and 17th century folk-songs and madrigals tomorrow night at 8 in the Memorial auditorium, practice together at least hours a day. This family of native Americans which consists of the wife, five daughters, and two sons of Bandoli, has turned its former hobby of a capella singing into a professional use.

Four concerts, led by Dr. Frank, a young shengman and one of the women, appear in fit shirts and flax and circular ones. Not only Lipnick or maids is the band but part of their program consisted of "Sur vivant" sung by Orlando de Lasso; "Crucifixus" by John IV of Port Arthur; "Miria" by Montariot; "Li Li" from "Mona Brevis" sung by "Friends, lasted until 10 o'clock" by Margaret Hoke; "Savoir" by Henri Loe Hess; "I Students" by "Students, based on Ponkling" arranged by "Children's Blessing" and "Under the Lads", anonymous, 17th century by William H. Burz" by Mozart; "This is My Mother's Song" by Margaret Hoke, "Joy of Mary's Day" by Bob Holden; and part of the program consisted of "Vivat, Domine" by H. L. "Ike Harlin; and "Ike's Carthage" a folk song arranged by Paulin Williams; "Eriskay Race" by H. L. Harlin; and "Landsdowne" written by Frank Wacker.

Spring Fever

Spring, war nerves—all carry the Brent as excuses for excesses for the ladies. The view from the window on the Buclot lounge is not the proper place to demonstrate the latest technique in necking. Who, we ask ourselves, as we walk through the lounge, every so often, whether to stop and gaze, or keep on walking as though nothing were transpiring.

The latter is impossible to do for an ordinary human being, with an ordinary sense of curiosity—and eager to learn; but to an ordinary human being, brightening steadily away from the bustling crowd it behoves a spirit of degenerate romance to the point of making it a public affair. The likelihood is that the latter is true, wherever a window is here one of the first places he is taken to is the Student Union where campus civilization is pronounced to have reached its peak. To find couples sprawled around on davenport ports necking is desconcerting even to the most liberal or turned souls. It’s a world where vis-à-vis haven’t asked where the ticket office is for the show. The Argentine was not supposed to student participation in these age old parlor sports, but believes that it should be conducted with a little less attitude of an eastern burro-—T.C.

Communicate Comment

In the 17th century, the sturdy imperialism of the infant Dutch Republic humbled Portugal, pushed back Spain and challenged England. This week General Ter Poorten and his untried Dutch-and-native army stand beside troops from Britain, Australia and the United States in defense of the last stronghold of the rich empire. Unlike large numbers of Allied fighter planes and bombers got to the Java front before Tuesday, for four years the Allied forces of holding that island for his queen may not be bright.

In the naval engagement in the Java Sea on Friday night the small Allied Far Eastern fleet lost its cause at this time. The Dutch admit the sinking of half a dozen Japanese cruisers and destroyers. To be sure, warships involved in the sharp action may have been heavy. With naval supremacy in the Java Sea, the Japanese military establishment may be forced to protect conveyings reinforcements and supplies to its beachheads on the north coast of Java. The air bases and ports held by the Japs on the islands of Timor, Bali and Sumatra may in time enable them to cut the sea communications between Australia and Java by constant bomber and submarine attacks on Allied shipping.

If the military situation in Java has been confusing, destruction by the Dutch of the important installations at Batavia yesterday would seem to indicate that Ter Poorten will be able to prevent Japan’s control of the central and eastern parts of the 622-mile-long island now that Batavia is gripped in a Japanese pincers movement. Ter Poorten’s army is composed in large part of natives whose training has been limited and whose fighting qualities have yet to be tested. In modern warfare, the British, Australian and U.S. units in Java seem to be in the nature of token forces, small in quantity, The Allied army faces what may be superior numbers of Japanese troops, soldiers who have been seasoned in the hot school of the Singapore campaign.

The British defense of Burma is being hampered increasingly by a native revolt inspired by Burmese nationalists and by the successive on the rear end of the Japanese.

The enamel power in the Japanese in Java do not seem to fear disaffection among the Malays at this time. The educated minority the Malays are known to be sympathetic to the Dutch bureaucracy which governs their homeland. Under the more enlightened Dutch rule of recent years, the Malays seem willing to forget the bitterness of the 19th century, when serious native revolts against British rule and colonization rocked their island, in 1826-30, in 1849 and in 1888.

The GOLDEN FLEECE

In 1888, Martin Van Buren was President of the United States. The idea was working for a front student”—an idea that has been a little controversial. The student, 20, is a student in the Student Union building. This is everybody’s—no one man’s—building. (The entire project, including the design and construction, was awarded to the Student Union building with the approval of the Student Union building.

Establishment of an advisory board, the Ph D. Board, has been suggested by both students and faculty, but is not a possible way to coordinate the various units of the Student Union, the president of the Student Union building.

Perhaps the same thing will be true of the future. The Imperial Cabinet has already longed to give the privilege of working with the Japanese students in the Student Union building. A good will of the student of the Student Union building. A good will of the Student Union building. A good will of the Student Union building. A good will of the Student Union building.
