The make believes of agencies of Anglo-American policy in Italy believe that the Italian government is in the hands of a group of leaders who are willing to make peace with and in power in Rome, to the comfort and quiet of the interests which have long been associated with them. The latest word is that the British government does not want to think about the possibility of a war with the United States.

Neither Churchill nor Eden gave the names of their ministers when they made their speeches last night, but it is possible that the British government has decided to follow the American policy in regard to Italian affairs. Churchill and Eden have already sent a message to Italy expressing their desire to support the idea of a negotiated settlement. This message was sent last night, and it is possible that it will be published in the near future.
