COMMUNIQUE COMMENT

Japanese penetration into the Indian native state of Manipur does not seem to have disturbed the Naga resistance at all. It was confirmed that most Nipponese efforts in the fighting against Manipur were actually directed at the neighboring states of Assam and Arunachal Pradesh. This strategic shift has forced the Naga's to give more of their energy toward fighting the British in both Manipur and Kohima, which has separated them from their main supply routes.

For the moment, the British forces around Imphal have been thrown off balance by Japanese strategy. Rounding up supplies around Imphal, the Nipponese have begun to prepare a major assault on Manipur, and the British have moved their forts to the north to meet this threat. The situation is dire, but with American supplies and reinforcements on the way, there is hope that the Naga resistance can withstand the Nipponese threat for a while longer.

New Delhi officials have maintained the importance of the Japanese threat to Manipur. This is part of a broader effort to counter Japanese propaganda which claims that the Allied nations are "sick" and "dying." American and British administrations in the region have traditionally been dismissive of the Japanese threat, but the defeat at Kohima has opened eyes to the possibilities of a major Japanese invasion.

We Make Our Own Fun

In contrast to the Naga's habit of flaunting their resistance and suffering their losses bravely, the women of the Chings have had little to lose and nothing to gain from their ongoing rebellion. This has caused them to adapt and change their behavior in order to maintain their samhi status. The women of the Chings have had to learn new ways of life to stay on the right side of the law. The Naga's resistance is an example of the women's resilience, as they have remained strong and have continued to maintain their social status.

There are various forms of recreation and relaxation that are popular among the women of the Chings. Many women have been known to participate in the traditional Chings festival, which holds open discussion meetings every Friday night. Though they have been well attended, the students will still strike a balance between their schoolwork and their personal interests. In some cases, the associations made and information gained are of more value to them in cultivating a sense of tradition and identity than anything else.

In the end, we can only hope that these women will continue to adapt and thrive in the face of such challenges, and that they will continue to be able to maintain their traditional values and practices in the face of modernity and change.

EASTER, 1944

On a small island south of India, the Easter holiday was observed with a sense of disbelief and despair. The miracle of the empty tomb had been witnessed, but the hope that it brought had been shattered by the ongoing war. The war had taken its toll, and the once hopeful atmosphere was now replaced by despair and desolation.

There were few who celebrated Easter in this manner. The singing of hymns and the breaking of bread were rare sights. The only sound was the distant rumble of artillery, and the occasional scream of a bomb falling nearby.

The American Heroes Among Us

The American military has been a source of inspiration and pride for the women of the Chings. The stories of their heroes, such as John Hill, have been passed down through generations. They have also been inspired by the stories of the American nurses who worked in the Chings, and the nurses who worked in India during the war. The women of the Chings have been grateful for the support and assistance that the American military has provided them.

You don't mean you're going to let a chicken outsmart you.

A chicken knows that an egg won't hatch unless you sit on it the proper length of time.
As with eggs, so with nest eggs. The best nest egg in the world today is the War Bond. It's an incomparably safe investment. It pays $4 for every $3 you put up.
But...
In order to get that nice fat interest, you have to sit on a Bond for the proper length of time. 10 years to be exact.

You can get your money before that, any time after 60 days. But you won't get the full benefit. You lose the interest. You take your money out of the fight. You kill off savings that might be a blessing in days when money doesn't flow as freely as it does today.
Buy more War Bonds. Sit on them.
