BY GEORGE

A new Veterans Administrative educational office is to be established in northern Idaho in the near future. The office is being established in cooperation with the state university and the local veterans council. The office will be located in Moscow, Idaho, and will provide educational and counseling services to veterans of all wars.

The purpose of this new regional office is to serve the needs of veterans residing in the state. The office will provide educational and vocational guidance, as well as counseling services to veterans.

It is anticipated that the office will be staffed by a full-time administrator and several part-time counselors. The office will be open to veterans of all wars, including those who served in World War II, Korea, and Vietnam.

The office will also provide information on veterans' benefits, such as education and training programs, employment assistance, and medical services.

The office will be located in the old Boise State Normal School building, which is currently being renovated to accommodate the new office. The office is scheduled to open in the fall of this year.

War Famine Faces Millions In Poverty-Torn Europe

WITH TRANSMISSIONS of the war still in our minds, and with the vast array of needs in the minds of millions, we are again faced with the need for food and resources. The nations of Europe are experiencing unprecedented poverty, and millions of people are in desperate need of food and resources.

The European nations are struggling to cope with the aftermath of the war, and the need for food is greater than ever before. The nations of Europe are facing a food crisis, and the need for food assistance is critical.

Foresters Attend Summer Camp

A group of foresters attended a summer camp in the Pacific Northwest. The camp was sponsored by the Idaho Forestry Association, and was designed to provide training and education for foresters.

The camp was held in a beautiful forest setting, and included a variety of activities, including hiking, swimming, and outdoor recreation.

The camp was attended by foresters from all over the state, and was open to both professional and student foresters.

The camp was a great success, and the participants were able to gain valuable knowledge and skills.

The next meeting of the Idaho Forestry Association will be held in the spring of this year. The meeting will be held in the same beautiful setting as the summer camp.

Foresight on the Main Street

Widow work has no place in railroading. On the "Main Street of the Northwest," transportation is scientific business, demanding painstaking tests, research and planning applied to vital things, small and large alike.

To the people of the Northern Pacific lid engineer roads, with a microscope, the past, present, and probable future of a pouring of steel. From the sample, he can name the temperature at which it was forged and predict how the metal will perform under practical railroad operating conditions.

Research is helping the Northern Pacific give Main Street fine transportation service.
List Reveals 876
Chose Idaho
For First Year

Nearly half of Idaho's high school seniors who entered college last fall decided to enroll in a school in the state. University officials, in an annual survey conducted by the state's higher education department, reported a 49 percent freshman enrollment rate. This year's figures are slightly higher than last year's, which was 48 percent.

Out of the 876 seniors returning to Idaho for the 1965-66 academic year, 434 or 49.3 percent were female. The majority, 370, entered Idaho's four-year colleges, while 64 enrolled at Idaho State College. The remaining 36 students entered junior colleges and four-year colleges out of state.

President Harrison C. Dula, Idaho State's president, said the figures were normal for the state's colleges and were slightly better than the previous year. "We're still ahead of the national average," he said.

Boeing's
New Arts Building
Now Forming Stage

A new arts building was scheduled to open in September at the Boise State College of Idaho. The building, located on the campus, was designed to provide space for the university's music, drama, and art departments.

President Dula announced that the building would be dedicated on September 1. The dedication ceremony would feature a concert by the university's orchestra and a recital by the university's drama students.

The building would include a large concert hall, a small recital hall, and a number of practice rooms. It would also have a large atrium area for student interaction and socializing.

Alumni Return To Idaho
To Forty-fifth Reunion

Maintaining an outstanding reputation of the university which began in 1882, 15 members of the graduating class of 1968 made the trip to Boise to reconnect with old classmates, to renew acquaintances, and to celebrate their connection to the school's history.

In addition to the United States, there were also representatives from Canada, the United Kingdom, Argentina, Brazil, and Germany.

The weekend activities included a welcome dinner, a visit to the Idaho State University campus, a reunion dinner, and a trip to the Boise area.

Graduates were also given the opportunity to participate in a special reunion session, which included a discussion on the future of the university and the importance of alumni involvement.

Overall, the reunion was a success, with many alumni expressing a desire to return in the future.
Baseballers Split As Cinder Squad Romps Over Montana

To Conclude Season

BOB MOLEN

Vandal baseballers will close their season this week against the Washington State Cougars, a team which will decide the fate of the territorial division baseball pennant. Friday's game, last of the series, will be played at 3 p.m. Saturday the two teams will play at the athletic park at Washington State.

The Washis a few weeks ago considered the Vandals as a likely threat to win the division, but the Vandals have now dropped the Washis from the race. The Washis have been in the lower division of the baseball schedule all season and are likely to remain there next season.

Saturday's game is a must for the Vandals. They have a chance to win the division if they can defeat the Washis. The Washis are likely to try hard to stop the Vandals and prevent them from winning the division.
