Vandals Vs. Indians; Scribes Say Idaho May Win

Idaho Given Even Odds Saturday

SAN FRANCISCO (Special) — The odds on Stanford are pegging Stanford to defeat Idaho's Vandals this Saturday, but they aren't selling the Vandals short.

"We wouldn't at all surmise that Idaho is a possibility of Stanford's downfall this week," said Paul Poole, of the S.F. Chronicle. "And we wouldn't be surprised if Stanford were upset.

"We believe that Idaho has a real possibility of Stanford's downfall this week, but we wouldn't be surprised if Stanford were upset.

Similar statements were forthcoming from writers at the San Francisco Examiner, News, Associated Press, and United Press.

All the key college writers admit that Idaho has very little, if any, chance of winning this Saturday. The only holdout is Stanford that "hasn't reported," in their estimation.

Their only reason for picking the Indians this week is that "Stanford has never beaten Utah State," Jack McFarland, of the Colgate Maroon, explained. McFarland added that "the Vandals have always won in Salt Lake City, even when something strange or novel happens."

Schwartz Reports Good Players

IDAY's All-American—Idaho's 1954 football team was named to the All-American team, as determined by the Associated Press, according to Idaho's coach, Joe Schwartz.

"There's no way to judge how strong the team is, but according to the AP it's not as good as the AP teams of last year," Schwartz said. "It's a good team, but it will have a tough road ahead.

The AP only chooses one team, and it's not the team of the year. The AP is a national publication, and it only chooses one team."

"We have a few good players here, and we look forward to finishing the year and our season that way," Schwartz added.

Sorboe, Idaho's, oldest football, also has a few good players in his team, according to Schwartz.

"We have a few good players here, and we look forward to finishing the year and our season that way," Schwartz added.
