Inquiring Reporter Goes Too Far, Asks If Men Are Wolves

By SUSAN C. (photo)

“The MOTHER had labored throughout the day to ensure that everything was perfect for the annual wolf hunt,” the reporter wrote. “The wolves were said to be on the loose, and the entire community was in a state of alert.”

Despite the warnings, the reporter pressed on, asking, “Do you think wolves are as dangerous as they say they are?”

The community leaders, however, were not so accommodating. “Wolves are not a problem here,” they said. “We have implemented strict measures to protect our citizens.”

The reporter, undeterred, pressed on with her questions, determined to get the truth. “What is the best way to protect yourself from wolves?”

The community leaders explained, “By staying indoors and avoiding areas where wolves are known to reside.”

The reporter, still curious, continued her investigation. “What is the most effective way to set a trap for a wolf?”

The community leaders advised, “Use a live trap, and ensure that it is properly set and maintained.”

As the reporter left, she felt a sense of accomplishment. She had uncovered a story that would surely make headlines. “I have uncovered the truth about wolves,” she thought. “They are not as dangerous as people say.”
