The People Want to Help

Up at Ketchum they are dedicating a new million-dollar high school. Over in Idaho Falls, which only two years ago completed a million-dollar high school, they are going to build another--another million-dollar worth of classrooms built of concrete and steel. Two years after these buildings were completed, the people want to help build yet another.

There are not only the people who are aware of their educational responsibilities; there are others who are not. On the side, there are the people who have contributed their money to the building. The Idaho Education Association is also putting in a building in Boise. They want to build a new building, and they want to build it with money they have already contributed.

Well agree with the Statesman that you can always get a teacher to do anything that the Statesman wants. We support the Statesman in wanting to build a new building. We support the Statesman in wanting to get all of the money that we have already contributed to build a new building.

That's the situation in Idaho. If we are satisfied to fill our schools with teachers, we must be satisfied to pay for them. If we are not willing to pay for teachers, we must not be satisfied with the schools.

The people of Idaho, however, will not be satisfied until their schools are in the best possible condition. They are demanding that the schools be made as good as possible. They want to see the best possible condition of the schools. They want to see that the schools are the best possible condition.

Restrictive Friday

Restrictive Friday is a day when the teachers' unions are on strike. The teachers are not teaching on this day. The students are not in school. The schools are closed.
