We Remember With Respect

The major speaker who had been scheduled to address the dedication of the new university library in December, 1948, was not Alexander Lincoln, but Edward Everett, an important character in American history.

The president received a routine invitation to the event, and these are usually ignored. But not this one. The invitation was sent to Lincoln, and it was accepted. He was the first to arrive at the ceremony, and he delivered a speech. The president later wrote a letter to Everett, thanking him for his invitation.

Edward Everett’s words are remembered by historians as some of the most famous words ever spoken. Everett’s words were powerful and moving, and they have been used to inspire generations ever since.

The speech was given on the occasion of the dedication of the new university library in 1848. Everett’s words were a call to action, and they continue to be relevant today.

Everett was a respected lawyer and statesman, and his words have become synonymous with the spirit of American democracy. His words inspire us to remember the past, and to strive for a better future.

We Remember With Respect.
