If The Flu Hits—We’re Ready

An epidemic is a frightening thing to contemplate. It can bring the entire function of government to a halt in a few days. It can cripple a whole community and create a void in which people who are sick are left to fend for themselves without protection or help.

At the University of Idaho, we are not yet prepared to face such a situation. We have not been able to minimize the danger of a serious epidemic and we are not prepared to do so. We have not been able to organize a task force to deal with the problem.

The problem is complex and involves many factors, including the nature of the disease, the availability of medical resources, and the willingness of the public to follow instructions from health officials. We cannot afford to wait until the problem is serious before we begin to take action.

We must act now to protect the health of our community. We must take steps to prevent the spread of the disease. We must ensure that our hospitals and clinics are prepared to care for the sick. We must educate the public about the risks of the disease and how to protect themselves.

We have taken some steps to prepare for the possibility of an epidemic. We have established a task force to deal with the problem. We have purchased medical supplies and equipment. We have trained our medical staff to deal with the disease.

However, we must do more. We must take decisive action now to prevent the spread of the disease. We must work together to protect our community. We must take responsibility for our own health and the health of those around us.

Together, we can prevent the spread of the disease. Together, we can protect our community. Together, we can prevent the epidemic.

Optimistic Vandals To Aim For Upset

Willis Jumps into PCC Scoring Lead

As a result of last Saturday's game with Idaho, Utah's gridiron team was lifted higher in Pacific Conference standings. Utah's Willis in particular had a great weekend, scoring three times, against the Buffs, which ranked 16th in the nation. In effect, Willis scored more times than all of Idaho's opponents combined.

For the season, Willis has amassed 16 touchdowns, and his scoring performance has been consistent throughout the year. His ability to find the end zone consistently has earned him the respect of coaches and teammates alike.

In other conference action, Washington State defeated Oregon, 20-14, and Arizona State topped Washington, 27-13. These results have tightened the race for the conference title, and all eyes will be on the upcoming games to see which team can emerge as the champion.

Fijis, Tekes, Sweet Grab Football Leads

The number of underdogs on the football field seemed to increase as the game progressed. At half-time, Sineg Bijja Fijis lead over Idaho's Sweet with 15 and 12, respectively. However, in the second half, Fijis pulled away, scoring four touchdowns to take the lead for good.

In the fourth quarter, Fijis' lead grew even larger as they scored two more touchdowns. Tekes, on the other hand, could only manage one touchdown for the entire game, resulting in their loss.

The game was a testament to the power of momentum in football. Fijis started slowly, but their solid defense and strong running attack propelled them to victory. Tekes, despite their efforts, were unable to overcome the deficit and secure a win.

The referee for the game was announced as John Jansen, and the crowd was enthusiastic throughout the game. The game was a great opportunity for both teams to showcase their skills and improve their chances of securing a spot in the conference championship.
