I have received some letters in the last few weeks asking if I would be possible for the University to have a house-to-house campaign. I would be willing to bring such a thing to the university as well as bring in such artists as Ginger Baker, Pearl Jam, and Michael Franti.

I've been asked to be the campaign coordinator for this. The question arises as to whether there is any way to use the expense involved in bringing a group here to benefit the university. I then asked that I might be able to be paid for my services.

The Student Council passed the request and said that the expense was too great for them to pay. However, if there are any other ways that we could make the expense worthwhile, please let me know.
