Switchboard Set For Session

A central all-campus telephone switchboard to eliminate 'customer responsibility for localized long-distance calls' will be installed as early as today.

Kaye R. Delano, university burgeon, said the university has been preparing for several years to bring into operation a system that will replace the old manual switchboard. Delano said the new system is expected to be fully operational by the first of next year.

The switchboard will be located in the basement of the Student Union and will be available to all students, faculty, and staff.

The switchboard will be staffed by a trained operator who will be available to answer calls and provide information. The switchboard will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The system will allow students and faculty to place long-distance calls without incurring additional charges for the calls.

In addition, the switchboard will provide directory assistance and emergency assistance, including police, fire, and medical services.

University President John Smith said the switchboard is a significant step forward in providing a more efficient and cost-effective means of communication for the campus community.

"This new system will provide our students and faculty with a more convenient and reliable means of communication," Smith said. "It will also help us to better manage our telecommunications costs and reduce our environmental impact."
Christmas And The Atomic Cloud

Christmas, the Christian world's most universal manifestation of a collective belief in a redemptive, all-sufficient love, is a season of truth and light. All is new; all is joy. All is beauty. All is peace. All is hope. All is love. All is victory.

The Christian and the non-Christian alike open their hearts and minds to the sound of Christmas bells. The Christian and the non-Christian alike share in the spirit of reconciliation, the spirit of forgiveness, the spirit of goodwill, the spirit of love.

The Christian and the non-Christian alike look toward the future with hope and confidence.
