The Idaho Argao... of Fads and Fools

True to the form most fads fail, the recent trend toward sports memorabilia has come and gone. And for some unknown reason the fad's main victim in area schools which are in many cases really no fry.

The trend has seen a spike in the price and loyalty that followed the telephone booth-reaming craze breed in East First Square quaffed to a height so fervent to quickly evaporate. Display placed even more.

For a few weeks the novel "reeder," superseded in the past by stars in story and picture, has all of a sudden begun to appear on the radio and in print.

A "jumbo" is defined by the dictionary as "a large or oversize thing or person." The word is a word of Greek origin and is related to "jobus," which means "a large thing or person."

The term is also used to describe a person who is very large or who has a large build.

The fad has gained popularity in recent years, with businesses and individuals alike embracing the trend. It is not uncommon to see "jumbo" items such as shoes, shirts, and even food products.

The term "jumbo" has also been used in the context of public figures and celebrities, with many people following the trend of purchasing "jumbo" items as a way to show support for their favorite public figures.

In summary, the term "jumbo" has become quite popular in recent years, with many people embracing the trend as a way to show support for their favorite public figures. It is expected that the trend will continue to grow in the future.

Athletes Stay In Home State To Coach

The majority of the University students graduating from the school this year will remain in the state to coach and teach in the schools throughout the state. This was reported yesterday by Harold R. Einot, president of the University.

Einhut, of Bettendorf, Iowa, returns home to his alma mater, Iowa State Agricultural College, at the close of the school year to complete his work as a professor of education.

The announcement was made by the University Athletic Association, a group of athletes and former athletes who are interested in the welfare of the University. The Association is composed of students and graduates of the University.

The Association meets monthly to discuss problems of interest to the University and its students.

The Association also sponsors athletic events and promotes athletic spirit among the students.
