A number of festivities will be presented by the University of Idaho's Department of Music in the coming year as part of the University's bicentennial celebration.

Generally unfamiliar to the public, the bicentennial season will be launched on Oct. 15, when the University Symphony Orchestra will perform at the University Auditorium.

Under the direction of LeRoy L. Hendrikson, the orchestra will present the world premiere of a work by John Hirsch whose composition is titled "The Tattered Flag." This work is the result of a competition for the University Symphony Orchestra which was sponsored by the University's bicentennial committee.

The competition received over 30 entries from composers throughout the United States, Canada, and Europe. The winning piece was selected by a panel of judges consisting of prominent American composers, music educators, and the public.

The second annual bicentennial celebration will be held on Nov. 22 and will feature the University Symphony Orchestra performing a selection of music by American composers. The program will include works by Aaron Copland, George Gershwin, and John Adams.

On Dec. 1, the University Symphony Orchestra will present the world premiere of a new composition by an American composer. The work will be performed by the University Symphony Orchestra and will be conducted by LeRoy L. Hendrikson.

The third annual bicentennial celebration will be held on Jan. 15, 2013, and will feature the University Symphony Orchestra performing a selection of music by American composers. The program will include works by George Gershwin, Aaron Copland, and John Adams.

The fourth and final annual bicentennial celebration will be held on Feb. 15, 2013, and will feature the University Symphony Orchestra performing a selection of music by American composers. The program will include works by George Gershwin, Aaron Copland, and John Adams.
Communications-A Problem

In conversation with the ASUI vice president the other day one of the most pressing problems that confronted him was brought to light—why there was a great many more problems: primarily apparent only to the listener. He mentioned that in the many settings where the audience was aware of his presence, his ideas were not necessarily heard, that he had become aware of his own limitations and was more or less “a communication problem.”

It is interesting to note that one is always being called upon to improve one’s social skills in order to be more effective, to be a better speaker, yet the problem of communication is still a very real one. Activities Council Is To Be Revised

At its meeting, the Activities Council decided that a major problem in student government is the lack of interest in campus activities. The council is planning to make some changes in order to increase participation. It was decided that the council should start by implementing new ideas and organizing new events. The council also discussed the possibility of creating a new position to help with the planning and coordination of activities. They hope that these changes will lead to increased interest and participation.

Burdene Leads Discussion On Beard And Isolationism

The current political situation has sparked a lot of discussion on the topic of isolationism in the United States. There is a debate about whether the country should involve itself in international conflicts or stay out. Burdene, a student in the political science department, has been discussing this issue with his classmates. He believes that isolationism is not the best course of action, and that the country should take an active role in international affairs.

Dobler To Be Faculty Guest On TV Panel

The Department of Communications is hosting a panel discussion on the topic of media and politics. Dobler, a former faculty member, will be joining the discussion to share his insights on the subject. The panel will focus on how the media influences political decisions and the role of journalists in shaping public opinion.

CUP Tels Stand: Elected Officers

The CUP has announced that it will hold an election for its officers. The organization is looking for candidates who are passionate about student affairs and are committed to improving the student experience. The election will be held in the coming weeks, and details about how to get involved will be shared on the CUP’s official page.

The Golden Fleece By Jason

In a recent interview with Jason, the ASUI president, he shared that there is a growing problem with student involvement on campus. Jason noted that while many students are interested in joining student groups, they often struggle to find the time and energy to participate. He emphasized the importance of finding ways to make involvement more accessible and encouraged students to get involved in as many ways as possible.

Gerontology

Is Discussed

A group of university students and faculty members of the Department of Community and Family Studies at the University of Idaho are currently working on a project that focuses on gerontology. The project, funded by a grant from the National Institute on Aging, aims to explore the experiences of older adults in the community and to identify ways to improve their quality of life.

The team is comprised of a diverse group of individuals, including professors, graduate students, and community leaders. They are using a variety of methods, such as surveys, focus groups, and interviews, to gather data on the needs and preferences of older adults.

The project is expected to run for several years and will involve collaboration with local agencies and organizations to implement the findings. The ultimate goal is to create a more inclusive and supportive environment for older adults in the community.

High Schools Debate Before UI Students

The debate is scheduled to take place on Thursday, April 11, at 7:00 p.m. in the University of Idaho's Multi-Purpose Center. Both teams will be representing different viewpoints on the topic of aging and will be given the opportunity to present their arguments in a formal setting.

In addition to the debate, there will be a panel discussion on aging and its impact on society. The panelists will include experts from various fields, such as medicine, social work, and business.

The debate is open to the public and is expected to be a lively and engaging event. Attendees are encouraged to come prepared to have their questions answered by the panelists.
