Oath Causes Two, Maybe Three, Resignations

Idaho Regents O.K. Promotions

Burlington—The University Regents is in their regular April meeting and have approved faculty promotions, including moving one professor to a new position of associate dean. But the board did not promote Dean D. B. Theobald, reported that one in the University budget is pending. One faculty member will not receive any promotion, according to Dean Theobald.

The board also wanted to voice their displeasure with the "sloppy" work of the new faculty member. The board members felt that the new member was "not up to par" and did not have the skills necessary for the position.

Idaho Regents Reorganize

The University of Idaho will be reorganized, according to the board members. The new structure will include a new position of associate dean, as well as several other changes.

The board members also discussed the need for additional funding for the university, and expressed concern about the current financial situation.

Oath Hurts University

Two, maybe three, University professors have declared a personal obligation to refuse to administer the oath that all students and faculty must take in the course of the year. This decision is being made by the few who feel that they cannot interpret the oath in a way that will satisfy the requirements of those who have faith. It is, however, the position of such minor element of the University community that

In their letter, the students stated that they had no problem with the requirements of the oath except that they would not be able to sign the statement. One student explained that she found the issue of loyalty to be particularly offensive.

"...no

acknowledging the possible problems of those who do not hold to religious belief makes them feel unwelcome and excluded," she said. "We believe that it is important for the University to create an environment that is inclusive and welcoming for all students, and we feel that the current situation is not conducive to that goal."

The students also expressed their concerns over the potential effects of withholding signatures.

"It is important to recognize that the oath is not just a written affirmation of commitment, but is also a symbol of inclusion and unity within the University community," one student said. "We believe that it is important to respect the decisions of those who choose not to sign the oath, but also to ensure that our University remains a place of welcome for all."

Unfortunately, the students were unable to reach a consensus on how to proceed.

"We understand that there are different perspectives on this issue," a spokesperson for the students said. "As a community, we must strive to find a way to respect the views of all individuals while also working towards a more inclusive University environment."

The students are currently considering their options and may issue a statement in the near future. They encourage all members of the University community to engage in open and respectful dialogue on this important matters."

Dear Dean,

Resignation

Having been advised from outside sources that the current administration is not supportive of the students, I have decided to step down as President of the student government. I believe that it is important for the University to be led by someone who truly understands and supports the views of the student body.

I am sure that the University will find an able leader to take my place, and I wish them the best of luck in their efforts.

Sincerely,

[Student Name]

The students were not alone in their concerns. Faculty members also expressed their dissatisfaction with the current state of affairs.

"We have seen a significant decline in morale and motivation among our colleagues," a professor said. "It is clear that the current administration is not meeting the needs of the University community.

We must continue to work towards a more inclusive and welcoming environment for all," the professor added. "It is important that we come together as a community to address these issues and work towards a brighter future for the University."

Despite the challenges, the students remain committed to making their voices heard and creating a more inclusive and welcoming University community.

"We will continue to advocate for our rights and work towards a more welcoming environment," a

said. "We will not give up until we see the changes that we desire."

House News

Dances, Dinners, Elections Held Following Vacation

The final weekend after spring vacation, our attention turned to the traditional round of living group events. Craft houses, of course, were in session with an ever-increasing number of students filling their ranks as officers. The annual ALPHA PI FRATERNAL ball was held Saturday evening, resulting in the crowning of the Alpha Pi king and queen. The dance was held in honor of the brothers, especially in the new members of the fraternity. The Alpha Pi event was also held in Alpha Pi house that evening with the crowning of the Alpha Pi king and queen. The theme was "Living in Spring," and the event was open to all. The sisters of Alpha Pi had made a special effort to prepare for the evening, and the result was a grand success. Alpha Pi sisters prepared a fantastic meal with the Debaters white breads Wednesday.
