High School Journalists Converge On Idaho Campus For Conference

A record 103 Idaho high school journalists from all 43 high schools statewide attended the Idaho High School Journalists Association's annual conference at the University of Idaho in Moscow on May 5.

The conference was a three-day event that featured a variety of workshops, seminars, and panel discussions designed to help students improve their writing, editing, and leadership skills. The conference also provided an opportunity for students to network with their peers from across the state.

Edwin F. Johnston, managing editor of the Lewiston Morning Tribune and host of the Idaho High School Journalists Association's annual conference, said: "The conference provides an excellent opportunity for students to learn from experienced journalists and to share their knowledge and experiences with one another. It is also a great way to build relationships and friendships that will last a lifetime."

Alliance For Progress Is A People - To - People Aid

By Mile Selby

Alliance For Progress is a people-to-people alliance established by the late President Raul Alfaro, Dean of the College of Letters and Science.

"A people-to-people alliance has been created to help people help themselves," Martin explained.

The creation of this alliance is an integral part of the Alliance for Progress. It was made in order to promote cooperation among citizens of the United States, Latin America, and the Caribbean, to create an atmosphere of friendship and understanding.

"The people of the United States have the responsibility of helping to create an atmosphere of friendship and understanding," Martin said.

A thousand dollars was raised by the Alliance for Progress to help the people of the United States and the Caribbean.
