"Mighty was their fanos foum little mountain, and mountains, and the little mountains, and mountains, and mountains, and mountains..."

All the freshmen candidates are faced with the same problem: they are all for the first time at the University of Idaho and the Freshman Class of 1969 is just about to meet. The candidates are the proud owners of the Hound Dog, and their aim is to win at all costs.

Can't Remain Unchallenged

This is not a fact in the war in which the United States has been involved in the past, but we have used it to try to change the minds of those who oppose the war. We have shown that the war is not a war of choice, but a war of necessity.

Dear John:

I am writing to the letter you gave me on the subject of the war in Vietnam and the United States. I believe that the United States should leave the Vietnam war and that it is time for the United States to come out and try to make peace in Vietnam. Ex-Servicemen Says Student's Views Dittorred

Dear Editor:

I have a few complaints to make against the viewpoint of the student, Bill Jones, in the 18 issues of the campus paper. The editorialist and I have a difference of opinion, and I think it is a matter of right or wrong.

In the first place, I believe that the student is wrong in his belief that the United States is the greatest country in the world. This is an interesting myth, and I think it is a matter of right or wrong.

Secondly, I believe that the student is wrong in his belief that the United States is the greatest country in the world. This is an interesting myth, and I think it is a matter of right or wrong.

The third complaint I have is against the student's belief that the United States is the greatest country in the world. This is an interesting myth, and I think it is a matter of right or wrong.

In conclusion, I believe that the student is wrong in his belief that the United States is the greatest country in the world. This is an interesting myth, and I think it is a matter of right or wrong.

Students Inquire About New Songs By Using Suggestion Box

Students have inquired about new songs by using a suggestion box on campus.

The students are interested in hearing new songs and want to have more variety in the music played at events.

The suggestion box allows students to submit their ideas and preferences, which can then be considered by the music department or event organizers.

By using this method, the students feel more involved and can contribute to the musical selections at events.

The suggestion box has been a popular way for students to express their opinions and preferences for music.

The use of a suggestion box demonstrates the college's commitment to involving students in the decision-making process and taking their feedback into account.

The college administration has been receptive to the students' requests and has been working to incorporate them into the planning of future events.

This approach not only enhances the students' experience but also helps in building a sense of community and engagement.

The college's efforts to incorporate student feedback reflect a broader trend in education that recognizes the value of student involvement in decisions that affect their learning environment.

Such initiatives can lead to a more inclusive and student-centered educational experience, fostering a sense of belonging and ownership among the students.

In conclusion, the use of a suggestion box for music selection is a positive step that demonstrates the college's commitment to student engagement and responsiveness.

The college's efforts to incorporate student feedback reflect a broader trend in education that recognizes the value of student involvement in decisions that affect their learning environment.
U-I Out-of-State Students
Come From Across U.S.

The average non-resident student at the University of Illinois is a male undergraduate from Washington, Oregon or California. The students are admitted in the College of Letters and Science.

This year, however, is no exception. The 1,150 non-resident students represent a record number and bring with them a variety of experiences and backgrounds.

The number of non-resident students accepted by the University is limited. Frank Young, director of admissions, explained that the Board of Regents has established a limit of 20 percent non-resident student body to be maintained. Because of this restriction, the University has an active non-resident student body.

"We do not believe it is ethical," he added, "to enroll non-residents beyond this limit." Young said.

We will still be accepting students outside of Illinois if demand from them does not exceed the non-resident limit.

The largest number of non-resident students will be from California, Oregon and New York. A total of approximately five girls are non-residents, and all were emergency admissions.

Many students from other colleges and universities have also applied for admission. In fact, there are about 196 students who have been accepted but who have not yet decided to enroll.

All out-of-state students are required to maintain a grade average of at least 3.0 in the first semester. Students who fail to do so will be kicked out.

Young said.

"This includes the students who have been accepted but who have not yet decided to enroll," he added.

The University offers a wide range of courses, but the non-resident student must maintain a grade average of at least 3.0 in the first semester. If this is not accomplished, the student will be kicked out.

BIG RAY POSTS NEW GRIDWORK

Dana Ray McDonald, Idaho State's football coach, was addressing questions concerning his team's next opponents, the University of Idaho Vandals, on Saturday's victory over the Blue Devils.

"Big Ray" noted the Vandals' teamwork and coordination, saying, "They work well together as a team."

He also mentioned the Vandals' blocking and running abilities, saying, "They're a strong team on both sides of the ball."
