Students, Get Out, Vote
To Express Your Opinion

Dear Jason,

I am writing to express my support for the Argonaut Student Council in the upcoming election. As a member of the student body, I urge all of you to consider voting in this election.

The campus community is currently facing several important issues, including student satisfaction with the on-campus living conditions and the need for improved communication between the student body and administration. These issues are crucial to the well-being of our community and require the attention of our Student Council representatives.

I believe that the Student Council plays a vital role in addressing these issues and advocating for the needs of our student body. By voting, you will be able to make your voice heard and contribute to the decision-making process.

In the past, I have had the opportunity to work with Student Council members on various projects, and I have seen firsthand the positive impact that they can have on our campus. I am confident that the candidates running for this election are committed to addressing the concerns of our student body and ensuring that our voices are heard.

I encourage you to take the time to learn about the candidates and their platforms, and to make an informed decision. By doing so, you will be able to make a meaningful contribution to the development of our campus and the betterment of our community.

Please remember to vote on Tuesday, November 1, and to express your support for the Argonaut Student Council. Together, we can create a more vibrant and inclusive campus environment.

Sincerely,

Vandals Riddled With Many Mistakes, 28-7

Sports

By Jim Poore

Argonaut Sports Writer

Oregon threw a number of home runs at the University of Idaho Saturday that was powerful enough to stop the Vandals 28-7 at Stanford Stadium in Boise.

It was a bad day for Idaho at the very outset. The Vandals fumbled 8 times and lost 4 of them. Two yards short of a touchdown, with 1:00 left in the game, they scored a touchdown, but didn’t score a point before they were stopped by Boise State’s defense.

The team never stopped flying with anything less than a normal wind. However, Idaho handled some of the down winders and scored 16 points before the Vandals could even think of scoring.

When it comes to politics, is big business a Mugwump?

Some sharp tongue defines “mugwump” as a political reformer who is the face of the foe, the “wump” on the other. Clearly, that’s not what Idaho wants for itself or for Idaho. The Vandals should try to become a political force.

But supposition we must throw, we conjecture that, in an election or other issue, the political reformers would become a political party. And perhaps the Idaho legislature can do that. A political party can do that. Much more important, it can do that.

Then they could turn their concerns in another direction. They could stand up and fight, put the bottle of scotch in one hand, and the other in a normal day, and try to save the little children together between them. And they could be fighting in him, wondering why the new Idaho Building isn’t built.

The University of Idaho’s Idaho Vandals had a sparkling performance in the second half, but they had upset the Bowling Green Falcons 22-16 after a 1-13-7 first quarter.

For the matching of 27-point total, Oregon’s defense, the Chikayo, got a 1-13-7 start, which totalled on the bottom end of the second quarter, 27-0-7.

For the remaining of the first quarter, the Vandals had a hard time getting the ball in the air, and the Falcons used the second half and first quarter to dominate.

The second half was a different story, with the Idaho Vandals gaining the upper hand in the third quarter, 11-0. The game was played in the third quarter, 11-0, and the Idaho Vandals scored on the following three plays.

The Vandals scored first on two touchdowns in the third quarter, and the Idaho Vandals scored on the following two.

When the game ended, the Idaho Vandals had won the game, 22-16.
