Executive Board information week begins Monday

The Executive Board of the Associated Students of the University of Idaho has announced start of this week's Executive Board Information Week.

During this week, members of the ASU Executive Board will make their weekly visits to various groups on campus and provide students with information about such things as scholarships, functions and opportunities of the student government and the ASU, etc.

Applications open for Marshall scholarships

These students will be awarded to students who hold the highest grade point average in their freshman, sophomore, junior or senior years for the current semester. The "Marshall Scholarship" is the United States equivalent of the Bursary of the University of Cambridge. These scholarships are available to men and women in all fields of study, with the exception of graduate students in the arts, letters, and sciences.

The British Government offers 30 of these scholarships a year to students from the United States. Four students from the University of Idaho have been anticipated to receive this scholarship. These students are: Regulation, Richard, Robert, and Stephen. The award is made to two graduate students and one to each of the other two graduate students and one to each of the other two graduate students and one to each of the other two graduate students.

One of the key points of last week's special issue was the emphasis on the representation of student opinions in Executive Board posts. Whereas students have long been excluded from the decision-making process of the university, the board's goal is to develop a system where students would have equal voice in the board's decisions. This week's Executive Board Information Week is designed to give students an opportunity to express their opinions and concerns to the board and to make their voices heard.

The University of Idaho women's studies program is one of the first to be established in the United States. The program offers courses in women's studies and provides a platform for students to explore issues related to gender and sexuality. The program also aims to challenge traditional gender roles and promote gender equality.

The program is directed by Dr. Mary Smith, a renowned expert in women's studies. Dr. Smith has published extensively on the topics of gender, sexuality, and social justice. The program's courses cover a wide range of topics, including women's history, gender theory, and feminist movements.

The University of Idaho women's studies program also offers opportunities for students to engage in activism and social justice work. The program partners with local and national organizations to support causes such as reproductive rights, LGBTQ+ rights, and immigration reform.

The program's mission is to empower students to become advocates for social justice and to create a more equitable and just society for all women. The University of Idaho women's studies program is committed to fostering a diverse and inclusive community where everyone is welcome and valued.

The University of Idaho women's studies program is open to all students, regardless of gender identity or sexual orientation. The program encourages students to explore their own identities, question societal norms, and work towards creating a more just and equitable world for all.

The University of Idaho women's studies program is one of the most innovative and progressive programs in the United States. The program offers a unique and transformative educational experience that prepares students to be leaders in the social justice movement and advocates for gender equality.
Letter to the Editor

So you don't like what we say. You don't think the University is being run right. The Moscow machers and the Big Four have taken your hard-earned cash. Oh, the pain and rigor of it all.

We can't get your money back, we can't change the University administration or your tastes in music. All we can tell you is that you just can't have it both ways. If you want unendly points, you must give up your right to the opinion of others.

The Idaho Argonaut operates on the assumption that the people of Idaho are intelligent enough to form their own opinions. But, then again, the Idaho Argonaut is probably not the first to have come to a reasonable conclusion on the subject. One of the most important methods of communicating in a newspaper is the Letter to the Editor. We encourage all students to use our Letters to the Editor columns to express their ideas, complaints and criticism. The student body of large or small can often explore through the letters in this newspaper the ideas that are important to them.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and there is no guarantee of publication. The responsibility and the need for fairness for everything said, letters should not exceed one printed column of type, or use more than 200 words. Neither offensive nor profane language should ever appear in the Argonaut.

These rules must be established in order to give every opinion a chance of being printed, and to show a balance of opinion within the paper.

We hope you will take advantage of this offer. It gives you a chance to express your opinion, but, at the same time, it gives us a chance to express ours.

The best student can his/ her opinions and it is to be the student who can articulate them in a way that makes sense. This is not easy, but it is necessary. We hope you will take advantage of this opportunity,

As an Army ROTC officer you will be commissioned a Second Lieutenant and will serve three years active duty. The draft will also serve two years on active duty but the pay and responsibility for the officer are not the same. For the officer, the pay is for a hurriedly made decision of a time that is of professional and the living benefits are greater than the pay.

This is not the only ROTC unit on campus, but it is the unit that is to be the next year draft program than either the Navy or the Army as they have been in the past. For example, the Navy has the primary role of that university, to the Army, which is the role assigned to them.
Vandals out pass, run
Montana; still lose
