Vandaleurs will present Sunday concert

The University of Idaho Vandaleurs will present a musical concert Sunday, December 15 at 3 p.m. in the Yoe chapel. The concert will feature songs and songs from the movies.

Negro history asked at UofI

A report was recently made to the Administration that a Negro history study group of several hundred students has been formed and has asked to be offered at the University of Idaho. A Negro History Study Group was organized at the University of Illinois.

Name changes

Today is the red-letter day for many students and faculty as the changes to be effective for the 2nd semester are announced. The changes are: R. P. Smith to R. P. Smith and G. A. Taylor to G. A. Taylor. Students who have not previously changed their names, wish to do so for the quarter, or wish to apply for a second registration period may do so by the 5th December, 1968.

Oregon AP man joins initiation ceremonies

Frank Weeks, former editor of the Associated Press, canvass for television news in the West, was present at a banquet at the University of Oregon's new chapter of Alpha Phi Delta (Phi Beta Sigma Delta). Weeks is a Phi Beta Sigma Delta alumnus. He was present to receive the chapter's highest honor, the Benjamin Franklin award.

Kirtley lab changes name

The Experimental Laboratory Intershore Research (EIIR) has been rechristened Kirtley Intershore Research Laboratory. The EIIR was founded in 1954 by Dr. Kirtley M. Spalding, who was a natural geologist. The new name is in honor of the principal investigator of the research at the University of Idaho. The new lab will be known as the Kirtley Intershore Research Laboratory.

Two members of the University of Idaho Children's Hospital consultants have resigned as a result of the resignation of the hospital consultants. The resignations are: Dr. William C. Young, Jr., and Dr. James E. Young, Jr.

Hartung speaks as concave of student government

"The most important thing is that student government is a way to express our opinions and to participate in the decisions that affect our lives," Dr. Hartung, principal of the University of Idaho, said in his speech to the student body. "There are more people involved than ever before in student government and there is increasing interest in student government," Dr. Hartung said.

Bauer selected as guest concertmaster in Chicago

University of Idaho Music Instructor and Concertmaster, Dr. Neil Bauer, has been selected to participate in the nationwide orchestra and concert at the 1969 Chicago World's Fair. The concert, scheduled for May 1, 1969, will feature musicians from all over the world.

Oregon police warn December drivers

Driving, drinking and the dangers of both were the topics for many drivers in December, warned Police Chief H. Winters, Idaho State University. "It is estimated that in Idaho driving is involved in one in every four accidents," Chief Winters said.

Idaho English prof publishes verse dedicated to FPAC

Dr. Mary A. Fitcher, professor of English at the University of Idaho, has published a volume of poetry dedicated to the FPAC, a community arts organization in the state of Idaho. The volume is titled "Beauty in the Beast."
Nothing For Something

The controversy surrounding the athletic complex is rapidly approaching the bookends in its quest to be an reality. Not really. The new Facilities Department has been busy gearing up for the complex project, but the students have been left waiting. Unfortunately, the students at the University of Idaho have been met with a lack of communication and action regarding the complex. The Student Senate has been actively working on the project, but little progress has been made in terms of actual construction. The students have been left wondering when they will see the fruits of their efforts. The complex project is ongoing, and the students are being kept in the dark about the progress. The future of the athletic complex is uncertain, and the students remain concerned about the lack of updates. The complex project is a significant undertaking, and the students deserve to be kept informed about its progress. The Student Senate and the university administration must work together to ensure that the students are kept informed and involved in the process. The future of the athletic complex is in the hands of the university administration and the students. It is up to them to work together to ensure that the complex project is successful and meets the needs of the students. The students deserve to be heard, and their concerns must be addressed. The athletic complex is a crucial part of the university's identity, and the students deserve to be involved in its development. The future of the athletic complex is uncertain, and the students must work together to ensure that their voices are heard and their concerns are addressed. The athletic complex project is a significant undertaking, and the students deserve to be kept informed about its progress.
Vandals Get Pair of Wins Beat Sacramento, Portland

By Roger Kitter

The Idaho Vandals closed out the 1983 MOSAIC invitational last weekend with a pair of much-needed conference wins over the Sacramento State Hornets and Portland State Vikings, vaulting them into a better position in the conference race. The win over Sacramento State was the closest, with the Vandals holding on by a 3-1 score, while the Portland State win was more of a cakewalk, with the Vandals winning 25-13, 25-13, and 25-13.

Sacramento State — The Vandals and Hornets put on a great display of volleyball, but the Vandals were able to hold on for the 3-1 win. The first game was 15-13, but the Hornets never put up much of a fight in the other games, which the Vandals won 15-11, 15-11, and 15-11.

Portland State — The Vandals were at their best in this game, overpowering the Vikings with a 25-13, 25-13, and 25-13 score. The Vandals had a strong outing with Whitney Akrami, who led the way with 13 points apiece on the night.

The Vandals are now looking to carry their momentum into the remainder of the season, with games against some tough opponents on the horizon. The conference race is heating up, and the Vandals will need to continue their strong play to stay in contention.
Activists are healthy element

By Nick Warden

activists were primarily composed of a healthy element of conservative students. This was the refined opinion of Dr. William Barnes, prominent producer of Lion's Head and the Buddha, noted dean and invariably the best dressed in the audience.

Dr. Barnes referred to the activists on the podium as "a group of people who are not interested in the topic of 'Carnival revival at Boise.' In this case, the last part of their recital varied through the public halls of the university and turned away the nature's best.

The question of whether the activists are a threat to the university's atmosphere, and whether or not they are healthy, remains an open question among the students. A few in the audience, many in society, say only feel like heading towards the Peace Corps and the Peace Corps and the Peace Corps and everything right across the table should be avoided...

The student activist element is undoubtedly a healthy element who has been in a position to lead an active and healthy lifestyle for the past few thousand years. Dr. Barnes said that some students are not having education but are leading "healthy" lifestyles, and that the activists are a healthy element.

The question of whether the activists' activities are healthy remains an open question among the students. A few in the audience, many in society, say only feel like heading towards the Peace Corps and the Peace Corps and the Peace Corps and everything right across the table should be avoided...

Color girl expresses feelings on education

"This year's Rose Color Guild, Marilyn Gates, '58, concluded in feelings of concern about what is being done about a student who is heading to meet the middle-class student."

Color girl states her concerns

"This year's Rose Color Guild, Marilyn Gates, '58, concluded in feelings of concern about what is being done about a student who is heading to meet the middle-class student."

Marilyn Gates, '58, a member of the Rose Color Guild, expressed her concern about the lack of recognition given to students who are heading to meet the middle-class student. She stated that the university needs to do more to recognize the contributions of these students.

Despite the dissension, the student activist element is not alone in its concern about education. Many students at the university have expressed similar concerns. Some of these concerns include the lack of recognition given to students who are heading to meet the middle-class student.

As with any student activist group, there are varying opinions about whether the activists' activities are healthy or not. Some argue that they are a healthy element who have been in a position to lead an active and healthy lifestyle for the past few thousand years. Others argue that the activists' activities are not healthy and that they should be avoided.