$800,000 federal grant for forestry building construction approved

By Chris L. Smith

The University of Idaho has been granted $800,000 from the Federal Office of Education to help finance a new College of Forestry building. The building, which will have over 25,000 square feet, will be an estimated total of 8.5 million dollars and is expected to begin in March of 1961, and completed by January of 1963.

University of Idaho President Ernest Harting was sending a message from Moscow when the money was received. The president stated, "This funding is a long time coming for what I am sure will be a very successful program. The land uses, Federal land being reduced at last this term. We have not been able to arrive in the need for the work to be set started," the Dean reported.

A student said that the new building will contain all the necessary equipment for students, allowing them to have more time and effort. He felt that much of the equipment was necessary to have the building ready for future students.

The interior building of the College of Forestry is expected to be completed in 1963. The total cost for the building will be $8 million. "We plan to have a new building to complete our undergraduate program," said President Harting. The building will be completed with a height of 7-8 stories and located on the campus of the present New Building Forestal.

It is in this new building that will be called the "Oldie" building for the future. This building will be a new major addition to the University. The building was moved from the first major building and was unable to have the old building in the new location.

Edgar Freeman, chairman of the building committees of the College of Forestry, said that the total cost for the construction will be $8 million. "We plan to have a new building for our students," said Freeman. The new building will be located on the new campus of the University. The building will be completed with a height of 7-8 stories and located on the campus of the present New Building Forestal.

A Proposal

The Moscow merchants seem to be somewhat ex- cited about an ad that I wrote before the vacation, and it is possible that some of their excitement is due to my focused and essential insights about the state of their store's moderate existence.

Finding the money to fund scholarships will be difficult in the future, since the University of Idaho is a tax-exempt organization. This will make it difficult for the Moscow College to raise even larger funds for scholarships.

The problem is that the state doesn't buy books, and the state's education board does not place the shelf with all the student needs.

The real fight will be in the next few weeks, as the state tries to remove the state budget, because the Governor wishes to remove the Governor's power, and the state legislature wants to remove the Governor's power.

The Governor's budget director, has indicated some of the Governor's ideas about priorities, and most of them have been good for the University of Idaho. Auditor has said that the state should "restrict" the University's budget, and that he agrees to the Governor's proposals, which will cause a great deal of problems for the University of Idaho.

The budget proposal is to be in the vicinity of $20 million. Auditor has said that he will be in favor of not starting the action until April 1.

Some have called me "a black sheep" and "political maverick," but I am a member of the political establishment, and I believe that the situation will be resolved in favor of the University of Idaho.

I am looking forward to a great deal of challenges, and I will continue to fight for the University of Idaho.

Does Alabama read?

Editor, The Argonaut:

During my time in Alabama, I noticed that the people there seemed to have a greater understanding of the world and its complexities. I believe that this is due to the different cultures and languages that are prevalent in the state. These factors allow for a greater appreciation of the world and its diversity.

Sincerely,

Vandals lose opener to Cougars

By Roger Ritter

"Things are more or less the same," said the coach, who totalled 12 of Idaho's 22 points. "For the most part, we were just trying to get our shots to drop," he said.

The Vandals, led by Coach Wayne Anderssen, scored their first goal of the game, and it came on the left side of the court with 19 left in the first half. Freshman Shane Miller's goal opened the door for the Vandals and a 20-17 lead at that point. The team played well and was able to maintain that lead.
