"I'm tired of complaints about the Argonaut… from people that like to gripe, but don't want to do anything about it. I just do a little research and there are so many things that need to be done that if you don't do it, who will?" The response? According to one student, the Argonaut staff is "too busy with the school's other publications to worry about the student newspaper's problem." But the problem is more than that. The Argonaut is a publication that needs the attention of the student body in order to continue its mission of providing a voice for students.

"Defend The System"

The problem is that the Argonaut is not doing its job. It is not representing the opinions of students and not truly reflecting the diversity of the student body. The editors of the Argonaut should be held accountable for their actions and should be transparent about their decisions.

"Defend The System"

The system as it is currently structured is failing students. The Argonaut should be held accountable for its decisions and should be transparent about its actions. The editors of the Argonaut should be held accountable for their actions and should be transparent about their decisions.

Music Review:

Tyler's piano recital given perceptively

By Ludwig Feuermann

Faculty pianist David Tyler presented an exciting, well-prepared piano recital in the recital hall of the school Thursday. Mr. Tyler presented a program consisting of "Sonata No. 2" by Schumann, "Volume in F" by Schubert, and "Volume in F" by Chopin. The pianist's interpretation of the music was quite effective, and he was applauded by the audience for his virtuosity and musicianship.

There is no doubt that David Tyler is a highly skilled interpreter and performer of music from the romantic period. His performance of the Chopin concerto was virtuoso and masterful. He played sensitively in a style reminiscent of Chopin's time. There were moments when Mr. Tyler's performance was especially moving and exquisite. It is well known that this Chopin concerto is one in which the pianist must convey a sense of depth as well as being technically virtuoso. Mr. Tyler succeeded admirably in both aspects of the performance.

The program consisted of three classical pieces that were excellent in conception and style. Mr. Tyler was able to bring the pieces to life, too. The Schumann was really well done. It had many subtle nuances of dynamic contrast and effect. The performance of the Schubert sonata was particularly effective, as Mr. Tyler was able to bring to light the emotional and spiritual qualities of the music.

SHAPES YOUR OPINION: John McNally, editor of the student newspaper, will present his opinion on the student government and the student body. His opinion will be published in the next issue of the student newspaper. The Student Body was not available to comment on the student government.
