Student Vote tomorrow in the referendum on change will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Library and the Memorial Union. The change is in the Physical Education building and the administrative building.

Students will need to show their student identification card to cast a ballot. The voting for the referendum will be done according to general student enrollment, so that the ballots to be submitted are accessible, with no person under 21 or over 30, and allowing one day to choose before the close of roll.

So around the calendar as that time is arrived on to Monday shift in the morning and then the semester by year and a day that the ballots will be cast the ballots will be mailed to the ballot box.

Students voting in the referendum will determine their preferences (13-40 maa- rent), so that the students in the Faculty will meet with the students in the Faculty and the students in the Faculty for the next two academic years.

In a completely unannounced move, R. W. Dixson, A.O.D., edited morning, altered the following question about the referendum.

What is to be the impact of these proposed changes?

The Faculty will respect the will of the students, although they might not see immediate improvement on the ballot, it could be that the will of the students might help select an administration that would do a better job in the future.

What is the reason behind the Faculty to support the referendum?

The Faculty is concerned that they need to make changes and they need to do it to the best of their ability.

Gov. Samuelson initiated by student group

WENDY: Idaho Governor J. B. Samuelson has signed a bill calling for a referendum on change. The referendum is to be held in the University of Idaho's Memorial Union, where the students will vote. The referendum is to be held on March 15.

The proposal to change the administration building and the administrative building, is to be voted on by the students, and it is expected to be passed.

Crisp, wide eyes. By now the students have identified their proposal as the one they want to see happen.

WILLIAM: He has indicated that he will vote in the referendum on change on February 17.

Will the students be asked to vote on the referendum on change before the final results are in the event?

WILLIAM: The referendum is not expected to be held now, because it would only be for the purpose of inquiring about the referendum. The Faculty would have to determine this and I rather doubt that they would.

If the referendum is successful, in favor of change on March 15, the faculty would have to determine if the referendum is successful. If the referendum is successful, the Faculty would have to determine if the referendum is successful.

The calendar goes to print on February 17, which is the same day the referendum on change is being held by the Faculty. The Faculty would have to determine if the referendum is successful.

WILLIAM: Probably the additional work of the referendum would need to be delayed because of the farmers' and forestry students' elections, which will take place in May.

WILLIAM: The proposal to change the building and the administrative building is to be voted on by the students in the referendum, and it is expected that the referendum will be passed.

A unified system

In a state with the limited tax base and revenues that Idaho has, duplication and overexpansion is not only unnecessary but also prohibited. Our system of state colleges and universities is the best answer to some of our present needs and is the most productive means by which the state should move.

As it presently stands, credits are transferable among all Idaho state schools. If you earn the credits in one institution, others must accept those credits. The problem, however, is that degree requirements are not uniform. Each institution has set its own standards, and although a student must accept credits from another, those credits are not applicable to the second school's degree requirements.

This situation works a hardship on students transferring between state schools. The advisor at one state should be able to work out a program with a student who plans to eventually transfer that will meet degree requirements of any state institution.

With the emergence of a junior college system in Idaho, coordination is becoming even more important. Many more students are finding it advantageous to attend a school near their home for their first two years and to transfer to another institution for their degree work. A unified system would simplify this problem.

The present junior college system, while replete with excellent instructors and some af great value, should be improved. Coordinating each junior college student can only harmfully what courses to take unless he has already decided on his ultimate institute. With the two-year universities becoming more upper division schools, it is important that students come from the junior colleges ready for their upper division work, so that the final two years don't become four; three years. Where it takes a junior college transfer three years to complete his upper division work, the student attending both the junior and the state college will graduate in two years.

In the total educational pattern, if credits were uniformly used, there would be no harm in using the lower courses of the state. Each credit hour could be completed in the junior colleges and the student then transferred to the university to work toward a degree. Those credits that are not applicable at either place they have to take more courses, and it could mean the institution.

The best plan for coordination among the state schools would be a unified University system. Under such a plan the state colleges of higher education would have campuses at Boise, Pocatello, Lewiston, and Moscow. All of the institutions would probably be under the University of Idaho President and subject to the same standards and policies.

The Regents have shown that they are in agreement with the concept of coordination with the junior colleges. The following letter to the president of the state college indicates the care of which such institutions are in agreement. ...signature. Right along with this, the signing of the bills of exchange at the same time conditions would be of a special approach it was. In this previous, what justification could the United States story offer to the way in which I am currently handling my Court of Appeal? That the chief of the division of higher education and that he is the master of the system which is his system of the operation of the University of Idaho, is the master.

This letter is not signed by the president, as it has been written.

Secondary Education Commission

Dear Sirs:

In the matter of: University of Idaho.

We are writing to you in regard to the planning and coordination of a unified University system for the state of Idaho. In the past, the University of Idaho has been unable to plan its program because of the many colleges that have been established in the state.

We believe that a unified system of higher education in Idaho would be most beneficial to the state. It would provide a more efficient and effective way of delivering quality education to all Idahoans. It would also allow for greater flexibility in the delivery of programs and courses.

We would appreciate your consideration of this matter and any suggestions you may have regarding the development of a unified University system for the state of Idaho.

Sincerely yours,

The Golden Fleece

Of floors and students

by Sam Bucharsch

If space permits, the Golden Fleece will continue on page 6.

The Golden Fleece becomes a more and more interesting work as you go along. It is the story of a young man who has been working in the wool industry for several years. He is a wool buyer, and he has become involved in a conspiracy to cheat the wool growers out of their rightful profit. He has started a new company that will buy wool at a lower price than the market and then sell it to other companies at a higher price.

The story of the Golden Fleece is told through a series of letters written by the main character, John, to his friend, Bob. The letters are filled with information about the industry and the people who work in it. The story also includes a lot of technical jargon, which can be difficult to understand if you are not familiar with the wool industry.

John is a good character, and he is very passionate about the wool industry. He is willing to do whatever it takes to make sure his company is successful, even if that means going against the laws of the land. Bob, on the other hand, is more cautious and is worried about the consequences of what John is doing.

As the story progresses, John and Bob become more and more involved in the conspiracy. They are forced to make some difficult decisions, and they have to deal with the consequences of their actions. The story ends with a dramatic showdown, and we see the fate of John and Bob.

Overall, The Golden Fleece is a very interesting story that gives a lot of insight into the wool industry. It is a fast-paced and action-packed story that keeps you engaged throughout. I would definitely recommend it to anyone who is interested in the wool industry or is looking for a good legal thriller.
Steve Brown (I)

SHOWBOAT "(VL)-Vandals center Steve Brown will pit his rebounding skill against Wyoming center Nabil Sajjoun tonight. Socryptor is spotting a 17.6 average per game in rebounding and a 21.2 points per game. Vandals defeated Brown last sprung in the high jump championship at the Big Sky Track meet.

Vandals host Weber this weekend

The Vandal State Athletic Board invites the Big Sky Conference with a perfect 4-0 rec- ord, Idaho National Football Championship and football sites for the Vandals' first conference battles.

The Ballston, fresh from two decisive victories over Boise State, will challenge the Vandals tonight. Idaho will be led by a very impressive sophomore, Jocelyn Hall, whom the coaches are rating as one of the best players per game, and who is the leading scorer in the conference. Vandals Coach Wayne Anderson feels that the Vandals" are much stronger than the 1969 team which was disastrous. "The Vandals" have a better defense, a great center and very strong in rebounding," he said. The coach said that "we are still looking for a decent night of rebounding resources."

"We will be at home for our first conference action in a while," he said, "and we think that we can be pretty competitive."

"The契s will start typical with the Idaho-Weber game and our second game at Montana State."
