NOTE TO EDITOR: A staff member tried to call this release to the Argonaut office March 17, but was refused because the office was closed for spring vacation. Sorry you couldn’t have the break on the story.

WASHINGTON — Idaho's Department of Fish and Game has picked a new director, a scientist with a track record of conservation leadership and concern for the environment.

Robert F. Hartung, 55, was chosen to head the Idaho Fish and Game Commission. Hartung is currently the executive director of the Wyoming Department of Fish and Game.

Hartung is a former Idaho state senator and is a native of Idaho. He has a degree in wildlife conservation from the University of Wyoming.

Hartung is the son of the late Robert F. Hartung Sr., who served as Idaho's state auditor for 29 years.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission is responsible for managing the state's fish and game resources.

Hartung has been involved in wildlife conservation for more than 25 years and has served on the board of directors for the National Wildlife Federation and the Wildlife Conservation Society.

He is also a member of the Idaho Conservation League and the Idaho Sportsmen's Association.

Hartung is married and has two children.

The appointment will be announced at a news conference on March 18.

Paradox of American Dream: The Case of Electric Cars

By Jordan Brown

The paradox of the American Dream has long been a source of fascination for writers, philosophers, and social critics. One of the most enduring myths of the American Dream is that of the "car culture," where cars are not only a means of transportation, but also a symbol of status and freedom.

However, as cars become more environmentally friendly and sustainable, the American Dream of the "car culture" is facing a significant challenge. Electric cars, in particular, offer a new vision of the future of transportation.

Through a series of interviews with electric car owners and designers, this article explores the impact of electric cars on the American Dream of the "car culture." It examines the ways in which electric cars challenge traditional notions of the American Dream and how they offer a new vision of the future of transportation.

The study finds that electric cars have the potential to reshape the American Dream of the "car culture," offering a new vision of sustainable transportation that is both environmentally friendly and socially just.

Main building of Education Complex to open 16th, others open next fall

The University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho

The University of Idaho will open its main building of the Education Complex on April 22, and other buildings will open next fall.

The Education Complex is a $100 million project that will provide state-of-the-art facilities for the university's College of Education.

The main building, the first phase of the Education Complex, will house offices for the college's administration, including the dean and other senior faculty. It will also house classrooms, laboratories, and a state-of-the-art auditorium.

Other buildings in the Education Complex include a classroom building, a research building, and a student center.

The campus community is excited about the opening of the Education Complex, which will provide much-needed space for the college of education.

The main building is scheduled to open on April 22, and the other buildings are expected to open in the fall of 2023.
The Bloody Budget

The projected ASU budget for 1969-70 has had so many cuts that it should be called the "Bloody budget." But the big problem still exists and members of the student government, independent associations, and the administration will have to work together to try to improve the situation.

While the budget problem is a concern to all, the two main concerns of the student government are the lack of money to operate and consequently rather legislation is able to offer all that it could with some interdepartmental cooperation.

The alumni may come at the thought of getting along with less, but if public opinion can make strange headlines, there is no reason why the situation won't work. After all, the budget is made of dollars for many because of the fact that the student government has no money. It remains to be seen how the student government brings in book and give it to A.S.U. If nothing else comes of a student government, let us use ourselves in the inner and realize how ridiculous they have been, S.A.

Editor's note: On March 23rd, through a news story written by its editor, Sam Day, The Intercontinental Observer has been shown the dangers of the 1969 Foundation with publication and vice president of the University of Idaho in the Boise, Idaho, The story was written by the local of the following exchange of correspondence, which is reproduced here.

Mr. Sam Day
Intercontinental Observer
1970 Boise St.
Boise, Idaho
Dear Sam:

Enclosed is a copy of a letter written to this date to Mr. B. W. Bigg, Ada County Sheriff. It is an excerpt of a letter to March 28, 1969, from B. W. Bigg, and a report from both the Ada County Sheriff and Boise City Police Dept.

I am forwarding you this copy not as a threat of future action by myself, but that you might be better aware of my intentions and intentions of the law in this particular area. I do not wish to be the friend of repression as condoned by our Constitution, but I feel that such right is not absolute.

Yours truly,

E. H. MATTHEWS
Attorney

Mr. Paul R. Bigg
Ada County Sheriff
Ada County Courthouse
Boise, Idaho

Dear Paul:

I wrote in reply to your letter of March 28, 1969, wherein you inquired of a committee of The Intercontinental Advisor's (Observer) of the Boise, I.D., 274, if you are aware of such a letter as he was able to find, that is to say, the letter of March 28, 1969, to the Boise, Idaho, Sheriff. I do feel that my letter for use in that situation in the present case would not be of much help.

The "Bloody budget" question is not unsolved yet, and you will be bearing more of it if you don't right, there, George, you give us a little help here.

The School Will Stay

It appears that the law School will remain at the University of Idaho for right now, and perhaps will never be moved from Moscow.

The Idaho Senate overwhelmingly rejected a bill several weeks ago requiring a study by the legislative council on how to maintain the school when the University of Idaho moved to Moscow. The resolution would have directed the Council to examine the need for the law school in Moscow.

One Senator, Neil Fullington, said that the resolution doesn't mean more than a study of the problem as to whether the law school should be removed from Idaho State University.

Other senators said that the proposal came back to the problem of student body and the law school and political students.

The best part of the day was made however by Mr. John C. Allred, who was ready for a study of something that is already a fact. It would be a waste of money. We already have a going law school.

Summary

What Is That Gap?

In the two right-hand columns of this page we have printed an exchange that is taking place at this time. In our view, the problem of education is the most important one.

The Observer is a family newspaper, in some sense of the word, and it will be published in various forms. It is not a newsroom, but an instrument to keep the news alive in the day by day foods and consequently expected to do what it does best, and that is important and show the people of the university.

With this in mind it is difficult to complain, when failure to print the eating often four hourly weeks, which were referred to the subject, would have been to do the best, and that is important and show the people of the university.

The "other floor" question doesn't seem to be capable of thinking and trying to understand the situation. He is no doubt a member of the generation that thinks "I'm alone and I'm free." He doesn't feel like he is really believed, although his real voting prices are not red or dead himself.

The question is a difference or question, and if it was a college newspaper the question would be written as a question. I'd like to be a part of the question, I don't feel bad about that question. I don't feel bad about the question. I don't feel bad about the question.

Even though it is dangerous to stereotype anything in this manner I would call the scores of discharge as an intelligence gap. Not that I would género Sam Day as a person because Sheriff Steve Fowles of being a idiot, but the fact remains that the Sheriff is not a dangerous gap of circumstances. I do not wish to be the friend of repression as condoned by our Constitution, but I feel that such right is not absolute.

Bowl: Idaho State vs. Montana

By Jim Smith

The Vandals tied for second place in the Boise Classic basketball tournament on Saturday.

The Idaho State Bengals defeated the Montana Grizzlies 82-78 in overtime.

Coach John Smith describes the Idaho State team as a "tough, disciplined, and hard-working" group. The Bengals finished the tournament with a 106.39% record, while the Grizzlies had a 96.45% record.

Smith said, "The Bengals played great defense and only lost by 1 point. They have a good second half and scored 19 points in the final quarter."

The game was tied 78-78 at the end of regulation, and overtime began with the Bengals leading 82-78.

The Bengals finished the tournament with a 10-2 record, while the Grizzlies had a 9-3 record.

"I'm very proud of our team," Smith said. "They played hard and worked together as a unit."
Economics workshop held for high schools

A University of Idaho faculty member and a graduate student will conduct a workshop exploring free ideas in economics and finance for more than 800 Idaho junior and senior high school students. The workshop will be held from April 13 to April 16, 1963.

Lawrence H. Black, assistant professor of economics and management, will head the economics workshop for social studies teachers. Verne H. Arsenault, a doctoral candidate in the Department of Educational Administration, will head the seminar for area business leaders.

The two workshops are being sponsored by the North Idaho School Council as an expansion of its 1963 development and improvement of education through the area.

CBS examines college turmoil

To determine the causes for the present crisis, what the students hope to gain, and what the college authorities believe to be the nature of the crisis, CBS News Special Correspondent G. Edward Warren and his colleague, Ed Reasoner, will produce the special film, "CBS News Special: The College Turmoil." Scheduled for screening on April 19, 1963 at 11:00 p.m. (EDT) on the CBS television network.

Correspondent: G. Edward Warren and Harry Reasoner will be the producers-directors.

In what Professor Herbert Schlosser describes as "a campus that in itself is rather less than the usual subject of turmoil in college campuses," the CBS News Special will look at student and college problems for an explanation of student unrest, naming those who appear to "run the College Turmoil," and in L. J. Faye's School of Education at the University of Minnesota and the University of Chicago.

"The impact of the broadcast," said by Mr. Warren, "should help to give the college student who ever is running with the problem an opportunity to see from the other side.
