A policy of alcohol or alcoholic beverages on the University of Idaho campus has been under discussion for some time. The Board of Regents has held several meetings on the topic, and the President has issued a memorandum addressing the issue. The policy proposal is currently in draft form, and the administration is seeking feedback from students, faculty, and staff before finalizing the policy.

The proposal is based on the survival of our academic system, housing, and safety, and it is designed to ensure that all students, faculty, and staff are able to enjoy a safe and healthy environment. The proposal includes a ban on alcohol consumption on campus, with exceptions for special events and certain activities.

The proposal is currently under review by the Board of Regents, and the administration is seeking feedback from the university community. The final policy is expected to be approved by the Board of Regents in the near future.
Incredible is the word

They forgot the students

By John Ovrich

Once again a select group of University of Michigan students have demonstrated the incredible sense of dedication to the word "preservation" that characterizes their career options and lifestyle. This policy, which is sponsored by any student organization, regardless of whether it has any members, has been implemented.

"This policy does not prevent a student from communicating their intentions to the university, but students should be aware of the University's policy on student rights and responsibilities," said Professor John Ovrich.

The University of Michigan does not permit the use of weapons, including any type of arms, on or in any University building, or in any area of the University, other than a designated area designated as a "campus" area. Weapons shall not be carried or used at any activity sponsored by any officially recognized student organization, regardless of whether it has any members.

The policy also limits the use of weapons to a "vice-president" of the student group, who must be a member of the group. The policy prohibits the use of weapons at any University event, regardless of whether it has any members.

Professor Ovrich said that the policy was implemented to protect the education of the university.

"We have received several complaints from students about the presence of weapons on campus," said Ovrich.

"We believe that the policy is necessary to protect the education of the university and to ensure the safety of all students," he added.

Homecoming expanded to week long program

Homecoming 1969 is being revised at Boise State and is under the new name of the Vandal festival. The week-long activities have been expanded to a week-long program similar to the Boisé State Pan-African. The selection of a prominent black, Mrs. Hattie Shaw, is one of the first innovations to the program. Mrs. Shaw who is a Black woman who is 6 feet 3 inches tall and played basketball for the University of Idaho, is known as the "Queen of the Idaho BBB's." Mrs. Shaw's selection was announced Monday afternoon by the Homecoming Committee.
