Hollett introduces athletic complex ideas to E-Board

By Chad Edminster
Most U of I students think that all of the plans for the new athletic complex are completed, with all of the necessary decisions made, but they couldn’t be more wrong.

Kurt Hollett, the new University of Idaho athletic director, is committed to making a change for the better of all of the places for the athletes have been made.

The plans haven’t been made yet because the whole project is still in feasibility study.

In the beginning of the feasibility study by Hollett, he is requesting support from the students.

Student opinions and ideas are needed by the university in order to finalize trends on the part of the students toward a new complex.

ASUI President Jim Wall reported that students are in need of the opinions of the entire student body and that the biggest part of the members in the E-Board.

The leaders hope that students will be able to get to the bottom of the whole project and that the students here born now can become the face of the university of Idaho and will probably be needing kids to look good for Moscow.

The Multi-Purpose Complex

The multi-purpose complex would encompass the whole athletic facility area near the rose gate. A football stadium which would contain most of the other large multipurpose facilities.

He didn’t say that since the complex will not be done for another year, but he says that the kids will be able to see the new complex.

The architectural firm from Portland would also boost the athletic department and the environment.

Faculty Council unanimously approves student nominations to the curriculum committee

For the first time in the history of the university, the Senate will be working with faculty members on the curriculum committee.

Problems came about because of the communication breakdowns between the Senate and the Faculty Council, Mr. Wall expressed.

To solve this conflict, the Senate and Faculty Council approved a new motion which would create a committee that would consist of student representatives from each college.

All pictures for the yearbook will be taken on the third of October.

Previous pictures cannot be used for the yearbook.

A senior will be in each picture.

All seniors will be taken in their shirts.

All seniors will then be taken in their caps and gowns.

Faculty Council approves Moratorium suggestions

Members of the Council seemed to agree that it would be to the better of all of the students if the moratorium was lifted.

It is very hard to respect the fact that the entire board is not working as a whole, and there is no more relevant issue that must be addressed.

Mr. Degroot recommended to his colleagues that they would have to push the issue the following year.

Faculty Council next meeting is scheduled for November 5th.

Editor, the Argument:

As long as the University of Idaho operates, there is an obligation to the students of the state to provide a quality education, one that will prepare them for the future.

However, the Board of Regents, which is responsible for the operation of the university, has not adequately met this obligation. The university is not only failing to provide a quality education, but it is also wasting taxpayer dollars.

The Board of Regents has failed to properly budget the university's funds. As a result, the university is unable to provide the necessary resources for students to succeed.

The university should be held accountable for its actions. It is time for the Board of Regents to take responsibility for the university's failures and to make necessary changes to ensure a quality education for all students.

Sincerely,

The gubernatorial race

By Glenn Mills

The gubernatorial race is heating up in the state of Idaho. Both major parties are vying for the governor's seat, and the race is expected to be a close one.

The Republican candidate, Brian Little, is seeking re-election, while the Democratic candidate, Phil Bell, is running for the first time.

Little is known for his strong conservative values and his support for lower taxes and smaller government. Bell, on the other hand, is a progressive who advocates for increased social programs and government intervention.

The race is expected to be decided in the November election. Both candidates are working hard to win the support of Idaho voters.

Vice President Carter addresses opening of Instructional Conference

Hailing that the University of Idaho "has never been as strong academically as it is right now," President C. Carter stressed the importance of getting started now on forty or fifty building projects as priorities. He gave the opening address at the two-day North Idaho Instructional Conference, which drew 300 secondary and elementary teachers to the campus. The conference is sponsored by the University of Idaho and the Idaho State Department of Education. Picking up the theme introduced throughout the university, Carter cited the working together at all the college at Law and Discovery to complete a significant study on grading for the federal government. He added:

"New buildings Needed

"We desperately need you and I realize it very badly. Building arrangements had been completed to begin work on both buildings but have, unfortunately, been delayed. We certainly hope that work will begin on these buildings soon."

"The whole of this university is greater than the sum of the individual parts. Its value to the state lies in the broad exposure of students it presents and the strengthening of law and industry and other colleges."

Many Facilitles, Opportunities

"Because of such things as the fact that students and faculty have access in the considerable library facilities of the University of Idaho and Washington State University, we have lost some of the advantages of being close to Moscow. Students already have a $10 million investment here, with labs and buildings acquired at preconstruction, they have facilities and opportunities here which cannot be duplicated anywhere in the entire Northwest."

Clariifies Enrollment Figures

"There have recently been conflicting stories about the enrollment situation. To many people it is surprising that our enrollment is slightly below that of last year. However, we have graduated enrollments increased 33 per cent. We present you with that, with your support, your University of Idaho will continue to improve."

The University of Idaho Student Chapter of the Wildlife Society will present Dr. Ron Shugard Tuesday, October 24. It will speak on "Big Game Problems in New Zealand." This will be held in the UIUB, due to the enrollment."

Grizzlies look for revenge against Vandals

The situation is much the same this year as it was last year for the Vandals when they traveled to Missoula to play the University of Montana. Missoula has won six straight games in the series, and the Grizzlies are looking for revenge.

Jerry Grooms scored the only touchdown of the game as the Grizzlies defeated Montana 14-7 in Missoula last year. Montana had a 7-0 lead at halftime, but the Grizzlies were able to score the only points of the second half.

The Grizzlies now that game 1-0, and the Montana team has been excelling to average that loss. Montana didn't have much time in which to regroup last year when they traveled to Missoula and went 8-0, the team believes they can be successful this year.

Missoula head coach Bud Kluth has been named the new head coach of the Montana State Grizzlies. Kluth has led the Grizzlies to a 2-1 record in the three games he has coached this season.

Kluth is expected to bring a hard-nosed, aggressive brand of football to Montana State.

Game time is set for 2:00 p.m. on Sunday, October 10, at Washington-Grizzly Stadium in Missoula.
Theophilus Tower

When the plans for Theophilus Tower were first being conceived nearly 21 years ago, the architects of the University of Idaho Housing Department had a provision to allow for an auxiliary building to accommodate the overflow of students during the rush for dormitory space. This building, which was to house 120 students, was never built. Now that students are utilizing the bread shelter and the facilities of the Towers Hotel, the $4 million construction for the building began in November of 1967 and was completed in September, 1969.

As new accommodations, 250 students, and space for the future are added to the total capacity (168 students) of the University Hotel, the $4 million construction for the building began in November of 1967 and was completed in September, 1969.

The plan for the structure is to house 120 students, and space for the future is added to the total capacity (168 students) of the University Hotel.

The rooms are occupied by two students. Two rooms in each of the rooms, the cost of which is $35 per person per year, are utilized. The student in the room for each resident is a Tower— it is not subject to occupation by the individual halls.

Since the Tower has no dining room, the Galley kitchen cabinets have been slightly rearranged in order to facilitate the several halls of meals. The Tower is equipped for maintenance of two special dining areas, each of which may be a combination of one to four persons, etc., of dinner and a dinner, formal or informal.

To avoid confusion at the present time, however, the halls have been divided to match their functions and areas.

The living arrangements between the men's and women's living groups has presented no problem, and the living groups are responsible for enforcing housing regulations and a resident assistant is assigned to each hall as an overseer.

As a result of the present arrangement of Theophilus Tower is a very enjoyable and friendly life in more ways that meets.
