Hartung outlines goals in speech

President, Dr. Ernest Hartung.

The problem of the Lowell Institute that the Governor was good enough to bring to the floor of the Senate last Thursday is an immediate and crucial issue. For, while it is true that problems of this magnitude are not new in Lowell or in Boston, it is true also that they are growing with a swiftness and intensity that is producing a national concern.

In the international situation we must seek to understand the problems of the many peoples of the world today. We must learn to overcome the isolationist attitudes that have caused so much trouble in the past. It is not enough to speak of international understanding. We must work to understand the problems of other peoples.

The problem of the Lowell Institute is a problem of the world today. We must learn to understand each other, to work together, to solve the problems that confront us.

In the past, we have sought to understand each other through the medium of language. Language is the key to understanding. It is the key to communication.

The Lowell Institute is a place where language is taught. The foundation is a place for the study of language. It is a place where we can learn to understand each other.

In the past, we have sought to understand each other through the medium of science. Science is the key to understanding. It is the key to progress.

The Lowell Institute is a place where science is taught. The foundation is a place for the study of science. It is a place where we can learn to understand each other.

In the past, we have sought to understand each other through the medium of art. Art is the key to understanding. It is the key to beauty.
