Hartung tells of 1973 responsibility is key to future

New faculty faces appear in positions

A number of new faculty faces will appear the fall semester, according to Dr. Robert H. Hartung, assistant professor of English.

Among the new appointments are Dr. Fred M. Reedy, assistant professor of English, who was recently hired from Ohio State University; and Dr. Richard E. Bradbury, assistant professor of philosophy, who was recently hired from the University of Cincinnati.

New heads of the departments of humanities, English and architecture, have been appointed, according to the university.

Dr. Reedy, who will head the humanities department, will replace Dr. Robert H. Hartung, who was recently appointed assistant professor of English.

Dr. Bradbury, who will head the English department, will replace Dr. Robert H. Hartung, who was recently appointed assistant professor of English.

Mabel Willard, who will head the architecture department, will replace Dr. Robert H. Hartung, who was recently appointed assistant professor of English.

Children

In the last year the students at the University of Idaho have made great strides toward growing from the bondage of "In Low Permits." To obtain this freedom they have demonstrated that they are mature adults and quite capable of living their own lives without help of the great hand of the FS.

One group of students seems bent on destroying the reputations of students as mature and responsible adults. These children are also known as Dougs. Last week was Fast Week, but it might well have been Screw Week. Every night seemed to have been spent at a party somewhere, as though nearly everyone with a Greek pin or even a Greek letter on his clothes was there. Those of us who were staying at the Complex took the liberty of breaking windows and piling up the dirt outside like skilled graders. One group of overzealous fraternity men said that some of the alumni colleges and housewomen in their charge to get in. The FS was inundated with girls screening their house names at the top of their lines with total disregard for other students that were watching.

On the surface the fraternity system seems to be a good idea. It gives people a chance to develop a close working relationship while living together on a day to day basis. The problem comes when these people succumb to mob psychology and forget that their actions also affect others.

Letters

Writer states feelings

The Editor:

There seems to be some debate in the midst of many banterers as to the position of our young people. This is a normal condition and should be. We should all be asking why young people are so wrong. Each generation that has grown up since the one before it has made the same mistakes. Our country is a military nation and in Vietnam because of a nation of many people there are deaths. Many of these deaths have been by our people.

As for our country, the first thing to do is educate our people. Secondly, if we are to be ruled by our own people, we would do well to refuse to accept what our government gives us. As for the rest of the world, we should not expect to see things as we want them.

This is what you can do as students, individually or in groups (organizations). Beyond all athletic events, above the high school level, winning important events continued to the present year of your attendance. Happened to your parents and future. They are the only people that can be affected by your actions. And in this the end of each other is in their eyes. In this the end of each other in the women for peace, etc. Help your country now and continue to play the part until the end. The next year. Make the difference, or it will be done for you. With every effort. As for the second, the future is a commitment of your own. This has been shown to me. Edwina Wolf		412 Harvard St. Dearfield, Ill. 6201

SUSAN SMITH

U of I coeds join Campus Afloat for fall semester

Susan Smith, an English major from Long Beach, Calif., has been selected to join the World Campus Afloat program of the University of Idaho this fall. The excursion for the fall semester lasts six weeks.

Miss Smith will join other college students representing 20 colleges and universities in nearly all 50 states on Oct. 10 in Houston to S.S. SYLVIA in New York Harbor for the study voyage to ports in western Europe, the Mediterranean and South America. The students will be split into four-sea semester's during the cruise. They will visit ports of call at week's end. The course will be taught in English, with classes scheduled in most western European universities. In the fall semester, the University of Idaho students will meet on the campus at the beginning of each week. The program will focus on the history and cultural aspects of the countries visited.

More than 100 students from other colleges and universities enroll in the program each year, and in an annual survey of the students, all sea semester's ranked the program as one of the activities of which they are most proud.

The University of Idaho Department of Music provides many carees and participation in musical groups to students

The University of Idaho Music Department offers training for students interested in careers in music or music education. However, it also provides an opportunity for the general student of the university to become musically active through participation in various groups.

The university has seven musical organizations which a student may join as a member of the University Singers, University Symphony Orchestra, Opera Workshop, Diversity Singers, and the Marching, Concert and Wind Ensemble.

The University of Idaho Concert Choir, informally known as the Vandals, is made up of selected students from all departments of the University. Directed by Professor Glen G. Loutch, the university has long been considered a leading college church group in the region.

The principal activities include the presentation of two major concerts on the campus each year, and in an annual survey of the students, all sea semester's ranked the program as one of the activities of which they are most proud.

Membership in the University Symphony is open to any interested student. Tryouts are held for the general orchestra, and university credit is granted for participation.

Opera Workshop, known as Music 185, is a six-week program open audition with the director, Charles W. Roberts.

During the first four years, the workshop has joined with the Drama Department to present "Oliver," "The King and I," and "The H zostałyn." This coming spring, the departments will present "Carmen," a story of passion and intrigue.

Also during the fall semester, the Opera Workshop will have full radio with the program of music for high schools, continue with the Drama Department in presentation of "The Telephone" on a tour of southeastern Idaho, and perform chamber opera in the spring. The Opera Workshop has applied for grants from the arts and music interest in joining this group should contact Charles Roberts.

The University Singers, directed by Vernon Logan, is the largest musical group on campus. Averaging more than 300 singers per semester, membership is open to anyone with participation of the concert. The voice qualities are a vital asset in musical singing.

Each year, the university offers two community performances ranging from major choral works to the latest contemporary music. In its current fall semester, the group promoted such works as "Ode for Freedom" by John Berger and Harry G. Loher, "Corduroy Variants" from the Broadway musical "Oklahoma!"

Probably the best known of the Idaho band organizations is the Idaho Marching Band. Directed by Robert W. Binkley, the band is composed of students from the university and the Idaho National Guard. The band is invited to compete in the Western Regional Marching Band competition in October.

Current plans are underway to further enhance the appeal of the organization with addition of a 12-month flag squad — an association similar to band.

1969 outlook for the air-minded Vandals

Air-minded Stater Serves The 1969 season with one of the country's top passing combinations, and, for a big change, will have most of the season's total offense to himself as the result of a head coaching change. Steve Olson and Jim Finley will start at quarterback, and will be the stars of the show this season. I know that the performance of the offense will not show their potential in the season, but you can bet that we will have a winning season in 1969.

First scrimmage of season brings starting changes

Ed Knecht returns to U-I to be Vandal Athletic Director

Vandal Assistant Knecht served as a Vandal football assistant coach under Bob Hendren from 1960 to 1968. At that time he left to take a head coaching job at Dallesport, Ore., then returned to the state of Washington when he was named athletic director at the University of Washington.

Knecht is familiar with the Vandal athletic scene and should bring some new life to the football program.

Ed Knecht, a native of Ritzville, a junior and senior at the University College Division.

The starting defensive will fall for the seniors, but this doesn't bother McNease as he said before the schedule was released that he would wait until the fall to make any changes. If they are good enough look at Stater this fall for you.

Sports notes by Dave Finkelsburg

Why Pullman

It's official now - the mighty Pullman.

The most important season for the Vandals has arrived, and the fans are looking forward to a great season. The Vandals have been practicing for the past two weeks and are hoping to have a strong season. The fans are looking forward to seeing the Vandals play at home and to watch the Vandal offense in action.
