Dear Jason,

Says Argonaut: Pushe! Scandal!

Dear Jason:

In the last two years, and especially this year, it has been the policy of the Argonaut to publish material that is certain to cause controversy. It may be called detrimental to an individual or group. It is understood that under the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States it specifically states freedom of speech and freedom of the press. There are certain limitations within which the Argonaut is required to operate.

I am sure that there is nothing new as the university of the 1960's is concerned. It seems to me that we have a much wider variety of political orientation than was true a few years ago. Everyone has a right to express himself in whatever way he sees fit. The student who is responsible to his group or society has a right to express his ideas.

If you have any ideas, general, or other such audience, you have a right to express them. The Argonaut is simply a vehicle through which you may express your ideas. It is meant as a forum for the discussion of ideas. Miss F. (assistant to Gable) will welcome all opinions.

You are chumming in your $12 or so per year gesture for the buck. You might as well have a vote in it.

Sincerely yours,

Michael D. Minor

Whither Education?

If there is anything Idaho State University State really serious is to be found in the present situation of the student body. This is a time when people must be trained for the future. The future is full of exciting opportunities for those who are prepared to take advantage of them. The students of today must be prepared to meet the demands of tomorrow.

It is true that there are many who say that education is not important. However, it is just as important to have a well-educated citizenry as it is to have a well-educated workforce. The two are interrelated and both are necessary for the health of our society.

This year, for example, Idaho State University State was faced with a decision that would have a profound effect on the future of its students. The university had to decide whether or not to continue its policy of providing free tuition to all incoming freshmen. The decision was made after careful consideration of all factors involved.

The university decided to continue its policy of providing free tuition to all incoming freshmen, but only for the current academic year. This decision was made because the university felt that it was necessary to keep the costs of education as low as possible in order to make higher education accessible to all students.

The decision was a difficult one, but one that the university felt was necessary. The university is committed to providing an excellent education to all students, regardless of their financial circumstances.

This year, the university will continue to provide free tuition to all incoming freshmen, but only for the current academic year. The university is committed to providing an excellent education to all students, regardless of their financial circumstances. The university is committed to making higher education accessible to all students.

Dems Come From Texas To Illinois

Madly For Adlai! Oh, Not Again!

By LINDA REER

JANUARY 10, 1960

The New York Times

U.S. Vice President Johnson, now running for a term in his own right, flew into Chicago Monday on the second leg of his national campaign. "New York City was so beautiful," he said. "I guess New York City is not as beautiful as Chicago, but I'll be back."

Johnson, who is also the Democratic candidate for re-election to the Senate, has been given a sound victory in the election. The Associated Press has predicted the election, predicting that he will win by a margin of 52 percent to 48 percent. The election will be held on November 3.

In other news, the Supreme Court has ruled that the state of Illinois has the right to tax the income of individuals who live in the state. The court's decision is a victory for the state of Illinois, which has been urging the court to rule in its favor for several years. The court's decision is expected to have a significant impact on the state's economy.

GOP Race Called Toss-up

RENEE WENDLINGER

Regional Staff Writer

I am not sure what the Republican presidential candidates are doing in terms of getting the word out. The most recent polls show that the Republican primary is in the hands of Senator John McCain.

Mc Cain's campaign has been a study in organization, and his success is due in large part to his ability to connect with voters on a personal level. McCain's ability to relate to people and to understand their concerns has helped him to build a strong base of support.

The most recent poll shows that McCain has a solid lead over his nearest competitor, Senator Rick Santorum. Santorum has made a strong showing in a number of early primaries, but McCain's ability to connect with voters has helped him to maintain his lead.

The primary campaign continues to heat up, and the next few weeks will be crucial in determining the outcome. The Republicans are fighting for the soul of the party, and the stakes are high.

Electoral Body Reform? Still Talking About It

Again, the question is: Is there a possibility for a change in the Electoral College system in 2016?...

The 2016 presidential election is scheduled for November 8, 2016, and the Electoral College system is in place to ensure a peaceful transition of power in the United States.

The current system has been in place since the Constitution was ratified in 1788. It has been used in every presidential election since then, and it has never failed to produce a clear winner.

This system has been the subject of much debate and criticism, however, and some have argued that it is time for a change. Some have proposed a system in which the President is elected by a popular vote, while others have suggested a system in which the President is elected by a college of electors.

These proposals are unlikely to be adopted in 2016, but they may be considered in future elections. The political landscape is always changing, and the possibility of a change in the Electoral College system cannot be ruled out.

The key to understanding this system is to recognize that it is designed to protect the integrity of the process. It is a system that ensures that the President is elected by a legitimate process, and it is one that has stood the test of time.
