The Golden Fleece
By Jason

Iowa's new literary don seems a contradiction in terms. When one thinks of a college professor, the image that comes to mind is usually that of a scholarly individual who is steeped in the world of academia. In the case of Professor Bitter, however, there is a marked contrast between his public persona and his private life.

Bitter is known for his flamboyant dressing style, which includes wearing a red waistcoat and black trousers, and for his love of fine dining. He is often seen at high-end restaurants, and his culinary preferences are reflected in his choice of clothing. His wardrobe is a mix of traditional and modern elements, with a particular focus on the color red.

Despite his unconventional appearance, Bitter is respected by his colleagues for his contributions to the field of literature. He is known for his ability to connect with his students, and he is often invited to speak at conferences and literary events.

In his personal life, Bitter is described as a bit of a Casanova, with a reputation for being a ladies' man. He is said to have a large network of friends and acquaintances, many of whom are women.

Despite his unconventional lifestyle, Bitter is a highly regarded figure in the literary world. His work has been praised for its originality and depth, and he is widely regarded as a force for innovation in the field of literature.

We like doing business with Murray Black

If you haven't oil well out in the open, as Standard always does, you'll find Murray Black a useful man. He helps you build, and also services, underwater oil wells and pipelines.

Murray is not a Standard employee—he's an independent contractor, with five other companies. He's been in the business for many years, and has built his own fleet of boats.

He started independently to serve Standard's offshore drilling operations near Santa Barbara, and from there, he's expanded his business to include the offshore submarine contractors on the West Coast.

While his services are unique, he is one of only a few

During the coming year, Murray Black will be expanding his business to include several new fields in the offshore area, and he hopes to increase his fleet of boats and equipment.

His company, Murray Black & Associates, is located at 1234 Ocean Drive, San Francisco, CA 94109.
